CHAPTER 10

FACING GUS MORNICK'S complacence, Sheila realized her mistake in entering.

"I saw my brother come in with you," she said. "Will you please tell him I want to speak to him?" She spoke with a confidence she did not feel. After all, she hadn't actually seen Mickey. And it was strange he hadn't heard her. Nor was Big Gus' reply reassuring.

"He didn't come in with me, girlie," he said, leering over his cigar. "He ain't never been here."

Sheila drew a quick breath of dismay.

"But he was at that club with you."

"Somebody's been handing you wrong dope." Big Gus was enjoying her discomforture. "I seen him at the club okay, but he was with that snooty society dame. I guess you know her. She was in your mob that night at the Arena."

"But somebody came in with you!" said Sheila desperately.

"Sure. He's back there." Big Gus indicated the grilled door "Want to take a gander at him?" He led the way down the narrow hall. "Dames first," he said, standing aside.

Sheila saw solid metal behind the grill-work. Mornick tapped on it and the door slid open noiselessly.

Sheila's eyes opened wide. She didn't know what she'd expected, but it certainly wasn't a rich man's trophy-room. And that was what she saw. Low ceiling, walls in rough cedar, a big, rough-stone fireplace, with a huge log blazing, deepy chairs and lounges in rusty leather, paintings of outdoors, rugs of wild-animal skins, a moosehead on the wall, a stuffed gamefish . . .

"Not hard to take?" Mornick noted her astonishment. "Get an eyeful. You won't see nothin' else like this in Boston."

Sheila believed him. Yet she had an eerie feeling it was

Deal Plans Third Term Test Here

By JAMES F. McENANEY and MARTIN POWERS

New Deal leaders of Washington and Massachusetts will hold a secret "King's council" session in Boston within the next three weeks to form plans for a primary battle in this state which will be watched by the eyes of the nation.

This the Boston Evening American was exclusively informed by sources of highest authority today.

Here are the sensational developments in the Massachusetts political war, the outcome of which will dictate New Deal plans for 1940 and President Roosevelt's third term hopes:

1—James Roosevelt made personal or telephone contacts with all the state's outstanding New Deal Democrats during his visit here, at the Jackson Day dinner and after the funeral of Port Collector Joseph A. Maynard.

2—The President's son and confidential secretary arranged a secret meeting of this group. It will be held in Boston within the next three weeks, in utmost secrecy, at one of Boston's most exclusive clubs.

Holds Little Hope For Judge Cardozo

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (INS)—"He is gradually growing weaker and only slight hope is being held for him at this time," Dr. John H. Keating, personal physician to Supreme Court Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo, said today of the jurist's condition after his return from Washington.

"When I examined him yesterday with two other heart specialists his condition was very serious," the physician added.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (AP)—Dr. John Paul Earnest, Jr., said today there had been "a slight improvement" in the "general condition" of Associate Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo of the Supreme Court

Brems to Be Tobin Proxy at Laconia

Mayor Maurice J. Tobin announced today that he had designated Louis Brems to represent him at the meeting of the New Hampshire Mayors' Club in Laconia, February 5.

Brems was recently appointed director of public celebrations for the city of Boston. Visiting New England mayors will witness the second day's running of the World's Championship Sled Dog Derby.

5000 Fight For Job of Digging Out

Police Quell Battle; 4 Dead, Many Hurt In 10-Inch Snow

Snowstorm Pictures on Pages 2 and 13

Five thousand yelling, struggling men today stormed Boston's unemployment bureau in search of snow removal jobs as New England dug its way out of the worst snow storm in two years.

Jamming their way into the tiny bureau offices in Church street, clamoring for work, the job-seekers almost tore the structure apart before a hastily summoned police detail was able to restore order.

The disturbance was caused when Mayor Tobin ordered that all emergency crews be hired at the office instead of at the various crew yards throughout the city.

Caught by the full fury of the storm, the fishing schooner William S. was reported by coast guards to have sunk in Nantucket sound. The six-man crew managed to reach Nantucket in a dory.

There they found that the storm had felled telephone lines between the island and the mainland, leaving short-wave radio as the only means of communication.

In another sea mishap, 15 men were saved on the disabled fishing schooner Catherine Graffeo when the coast guard picked the craft up off Boston Light.

Meanwhile, the city's entire force

Stork in Auto Snow Race

A Quincy snow baby and her mother were resting comfortably in Forest Hills Hospital today after Quincy police won a midnight race with the stork when the father's auto became stalled in a drift at the height of the snowstorm.

Speeding his wife, Mary, to the hospital shortly after midnight, Peter Joseph of East street, East Weymouth, was unable to drive through the snow near the Quincy police station. But a patrol car with Officers George Wyman and Carl Seppala made the dash through Boston suburbs in record time and the baby arrived safely at 12:55 a. m.

Radio Man Hurls Bribe Charges

This was learned exclusively by The Boston Evening American this afternoon following sensational charges voiced by Bickford before the joint rules committee of the House and Senate that—

1. "Twenty-five hundred dollars was paid to a member of the Senate in 1934 . . . It came from the Revere race track, and was handled by Martin Hayes" (former Republican floor leader of the House).

2. "Many more got it, too."

3—"Many members of the Legislature have been paid by the dog-track operators . . . the riff-raff in Massachusetts connected with dog-tracks . . . have corrupted this State Legislature."

In another direction, Bickford charged that members of the Legislature are "paid off" in money paid to them in the guise of "legal fees." And in one instance, at least, he asserted, a certain State representative took a $100 "legal fee" from a woman in whose behalf he had introduced a bill, passed by the Legis-

Green Hits U. S. Power Over Labor

Fascism Trend Seen; Attacks CIO in Address Here

Indirectly assailing the Committee for Industrial Organization, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor today told a luncheon meeting of the Boston Chamber of Commerce that sins and excesses of labor minorities should not be seized upon as an excuse for subjecting the hosts of labor to governmental regulation and domination.

"We are opposed to the centralization of power in the hands of anyone connected with the administrative departments of government," declared Green.

FASCISM SEEN

A. F. of L. unions have always recognized the sanctity of union contracts, he declared and charged that forced incorporation of trade unions and extensions of government control represented "a form of Fascism on one hand and Communism on the other."

The present division of labor Green said, is due to "a total disregard of unit responsibility and democratic procedure" of those who seceded.

He called upon business to "yield to the inevitable" and conform to the spirit and letter of labor's newly-won recognition of collective bargaining principles as set forth in the national labor relations act.

BUILDING IS NEED

Placing no blame for the present business recession, Green said: "When it suddenly broke upon us all classes of people seemed to be united in an effort to restore the productive forces of our nation to a normal basis."

The greatest need at the moment he said, is inauguration of a nation-wide construction program.

Maynard's Estate $100,000; No Will

That Joseph A. Maynard, collector of the Port of Boston, who died January 7, left no will, was revealed today in Dedham probate court when Judge Joseph R. McCoole appointed his widow, Mrs. Grace E. Maynard, of Brookline, administratrix of his estate.

Mrs. Maynard filed a bond for $100,000, the approximate value of the estate.

Chinese Report 2000 Japs Slain

SHANGHAI, Jan. 14 (AP)—Chinese declared today 2000 Japanese troops were killed and more than that wounded in desperate fighting before capturing Tsining, Shantung Province, Wednesday.

Japanese sources made no comment on the reported casualties but declared their columns were pushing swiftly southward through China's "sacred" province.

Women in Love Suit Scream in Tragedy

Tragedy laid its hand today on the sensational Salem "wife-swapping" double divorce case when a witness was seized with a heart attack on the stand shortly after noon and died a few minutes later in an ante-room.

Lyman T. Smith of East Saugus, about 60 years old and weighing 260 pounds, was nearing the end of his testimony in support of the divorce suit of his step-daughter, Mrs. Edith E. Lee, when he suddenly slumped in the witness chair.

Both Mrs. Lee and her mother shrieked:

"He's having a heart attack! He's having a heart attack!"

They rushed to his side, together with court officers, while the courtroom was thrown into wild excitement.

Smith crumpled in the chair and was lifted by half a dozen men, chair and all, and carried to an ante room.

Dr. Harry Freedberg of 2 Chestnut street, Salem who had been in probate court listening to the case, attended the sticken man and injected adrenalin, but despite the physician's efforts Lyman died within a short time.

TRIAL IS HALTED

Mrs. Lee, 27-year-old governess in a Beverly family, became hysterical when she learned her step-father had died, and she was taken home by her mother, a trained nurse, and by a brother.

Hearings in the strangest divorce tangle old Salem courthouse has heard unfolded in its history were adjourned by Judge Edward B. O'Brien until next Tuesday morning as a result of the sudden death.

Earlier in today's session, dark-eyed, brunette Mrs. Estelle S. Watson, attractive 28-year-old Topsfield mother, gave an already excited courtroom new thrills when she admitted frankly that she had swapped husbands with Mrs. Lee, her girl friend.

BLAMES 'OTHER WOMAN'

But it was the pretty governess, Mrs. Lee, who always took the initiative in creating situations leading to the wife-and-husband-swapping, Mrs. Watson asserted.

All Number Pool Prizes Slashed

Boston number pool operators today slashed prize money in half in a concerted move to prevent repetition of the ruinous "hit" that drained their treasuries of nearly $100,000 last week.

The action followed a "protection" meeting of representatives of the city's three leading number pool trusts last night in a downtown hotel, it was learned by the Boston Evening American.

Announcement of the cuts was made in a printed card listing 25 frequently played numbers on which top money, ranging from $650 to $750, would be cut in half for winning draws.

Hull Prods Envoy On Soviet Silence

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (AP)—Secretary Hull asked Soviet Ambassador Alexander Troyanovsky today why the Soviet government has not replied to an American note requesting information on the reported arrest in Moscow of Mrs. Ruth Alma Rubens, an American woman.

The Secretary of State said he "invited" Troyanovsky to the State Department to discuss the case but declined to reveal any details of his conversation with the Soviet envoy.

Police Quell 5000 Seeking Snow Job

4 Dead, Many Injured as All N. E. Digs Out of 10-Inch Blanket

of snow fighters, aided by an army of trucks and plows, labored feverishly to clear away a 10-inch depth of snow that paralyzed traffic, impaired rail, sea and air transportation and disrupted conditions generally in the area.

FOUR DEAD, MANY HURT

Four persons dead as a result of the storm, drift-covered highways, numerous auto accident injuries were reported.

School children in surrounding municipalities enjoyed an unexpected holiday as high-piled drifts preventing them from reaching classes and attendance in all schools was at a minimum. In Newton 200 pupils went on strike when sessions were ordered, but later went to their classes.

Public works department officials reported to the mayor that the cost of clearing away the snow would amount to $250,000 if there were no further serious storm.

UPROAR TOTTERS BUILDING

At the employment office, police reported that the milling throng of job applicants had become so unruly that the walls of the office were actually swaying when they arrived.

Reports that college students and young boys were being given work inflamed married men in the throng and shouts of protest filled the air.

Director Stephen Hughes declared, however, that no favoritism was shown. He said Mayor Tobin had ordered employment confined to the office to prevent discrimination at the various yards.

Girl clerks in the office were forced to mount tables and desks to avoid being crushed by the press. Police set up a human barrier, admitting one man at a time.

JOBS FOR THOUSANDS

The workers were then given job buttons as [illegible] for men came in from the yards.

By noon a total of 4500 men, 260 trucks, 270 plows and 41 snow loaders were in service here.

City officials ordered contractors to add their men to city and emergency forces. They supplied 500 men toward the total, 260 trucks and 26 of the loaders. Crosswalks and main streets were cleared and slippery stretches were sanded.

The Boston Elevated Company assigned its full force of 650 men and mechanical plows were operated throughout the night and today to keep service normal. Few delays were reported as 103 trucks, 10 tractors, 19 electric plows and two sweepers toured the tracks.

Boston & Maine and New Haven railroad officials reported that their rights of way were generally clear. Early morning delays, however, made thousands of commuters late for work.

Airplane travel was completely suspended at the height of the storm, but attaches at the East Boston Airport said they hoped to resume service if conditions warranted.

SNOW SAVES A LIFE

At the weather bureau, the storm was said to be the worst since January, 1936, when a two-day downfall brought 12 inches of snow here. Indications were that the storm would abate temporarily this afternoon and then resume tomorrow. Rain, heading North from Bermuda, was expected during the week-end, bringing threats of hazardous conditions.

Motor traffic here in the morning was jammed when mechanical trouble at the Meridian street drawbridge delayed cars for nearly an hour. Vehicles were rerouted after the bridge, raised for a ship, could not be lowered.

In Brighton, the snow saved the life of a man who fell 30 feet from a second-story window. He landed in a drift and was not injured.

Highways throughout the State were reported clear. Snowfalls ranging from five to fifteen inches were recorded. In many sections it had stopped snowing by 1 p. m.

2 Killed As Storm Sweeps N. E.; 15 Fishermen Rescued

Two persons were killed and 15 fishermen were rescued from their disabled vessel at sea today as the worst snow storm in two years swept across the New England states.

James B. Williams, 61, a highway employe, was struck and killed by an automobile at Marlboro as he crossed the street near his home. He was the father of Fred Williams, former city solicitor of Marlboro.

At Portland, Me., Walter E. Ayres, 66, manager of a Portland typewriter concern, was killed when his automobile was in head-on collision with another machine on a curve near the Portland Country Club.

Joseph A. Nash, 70, of Aldersey street, Somerville, was reported by police to have died of a heart attack as he attempted to start his car in the garage at the rear of his home.

BUS, PLOW CRASH

Traveling from Boston, a special bus containing the Ethel Waters theatrical company collided with a snowplow on the Boston Post road at Branford and plunged over an eight-foot embankment. The driver was slightly injured, according to State police.

Lawrence Hicks of Falmouth, Me., who was riding with Ayres, was slightly hurt. Occupants of the other machine, Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Haley of Yarmouth, Me., both were taken to a Portland hospital seriously injured.

Injuries from falls on slippery streets were reported in many parts of Boston. Theresa F. Conassey, 65, of Warren street, Charlestown, suffered a brain concussion and a fractured left arm when she fell at Green and Main streets, Charlestown. Her condition was pronounced critical at Haymarket Relief Hospital.

The storm brought bright hopes, however, to winter sports enthusiasts. Ideal skiing conditions was promised for the weekend.

Mrs. Sophie Deinecke, 22, of Waterman road, Roxbury, suffered back injuries. Miss Jennie Liminskey, 55, of Glisfield street, Roxbury, sustained cuts on the forehead and neck.

Tobin Leads Boston Snow Army; Thousands Dig Greater City Out

Mayor Tobin today assumed personal charge of the city's snow-fighting forces as Boston and surrounding communities mobilized small armies of men to combat the efforts of the worst snowstorm to hit this area in two years.

The mayor directed the combined activities of four city departments toward an efficient and rapid clearance of streets to assure normal operation of traffic and prevent impairment of health and other conditions here.

Boston's entire fleet of snowplows, tractor carriers and trucks furthered the efforts of 3300 snow furthered the efforts of 4500 snow ment workers were supplemented by emergency crews drawn from welfare lists and the city's unemployed.

CHECKUP ON WORK

Mayor Tobin directed the heads of the health, building, street and transit departments to supply all available checkers and inspectors to aid the hard-working snow crews. Immediate inspections were begun throughout the city. More than 100 persons were assigned to these duties.

Working feverishly all night, shovelers and plows managed to keep main traffic arteries open and clear crosswalks in business and shopping districts.

City halls here and in neighboring municipalities were packed with job seekers as the storm provided thousands of jobs.

Each city councillor, given 50 work buttons for distribution to his constituents, was literally mobbed by applicants as he gave out the jobs.

The storm threatened to bring serious damage to the condemned City Hall when weighty drifts piled up on the already weakened roof of the structure and threatened to crash it in.

Danger here was averted when Superintendent of Public Buildings Leo F. Power assigned a crew to shovel the snow from the roof.

In Cambridge, 350 men were put to work early, assisted by 25 plows, 5 tractor carriers and 60 trucks.

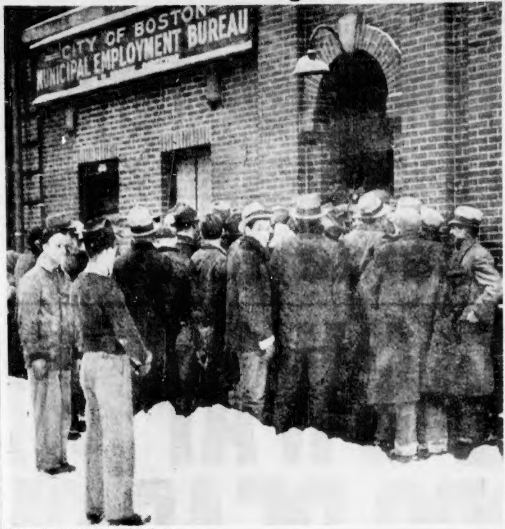
Numbered Men Dig Boston Out



Upwards of 5000 unemployed men seeking a chance to make a few dollars in snow removal work fought for their turn and shouted with pleas of "Let me be next," at the City of Boston Municipal Employment Bureau, 25 Church street. At daybreak men eager to work arrived and were soon sent on their way to do their work of snow removing.

Newton Pupils In Snow Strike

More than 200 Newton High school boys and girls, who thought it was too stormy for them to go to school this morning, hiked half a mile through piled-up drifts to lay their complaints before Mayor Edwin O. Childs at city hall.

Police were sent to quiet the demonstration when city workers complained the boys were engaged in a snowball fight in the corridors.

Mayor Childs received a committee of three students in his office, where they presented demands that school sessions be called off in bad weather and no-school signals be sounded by fire whistles.

All Newton schools were in session this morning, but Thursday afternoon is regularly a half-holiday.

After Principal Paul Elicker, his assistant, Raymond A. Greene and Superintendent of Schools Julius E. Warren addressed the strikers the pupils agreed to attend their classes.

At the school, Warren told the strikers the school committee had established a policy of keeping the schools open except in case of a blizzard, and that he did not consider today's storm a blizzard.

He explained Newton covered so much territory that no-school signals on fire whistles were unreliable but that no-session announcements would be made on the radio.

Snow Fails to Bring Holiday to Many Pupils

Boston school children went to school today at the discretion of their parents, while the storm closed schools or shortened sessions in nearly all outlying towns.

Communities where all classes were called off for the day included Saugus, Cambridge, Lynnfield, Belmont, Chelsea, Lincoln, Dedham, Wrentham, Bridgewater, Norton, Attleboro, Natick, Norwell and Burlington.

Schools were closed for the morning session in Wakefield, Stoneham, Needham, Marblehead, Reading and North Reading, Beverly and Malden.

Elementary schools only cancelled their morning classes in Melrose, Medford, Lexington, Nahant, Somerville, Woburn, Salem, Middleboro, Winthrop, Avon, Randolph, Holbrook, Swampscott, Quincy, Arlington, Brockton and Rockland.

In Melrose, Attleboro and Everett, though elementary schools closed for the day, high schools opened at 9 a. m., an hour late.

More Snow Is on Way

Possibility of more snow tomorrow night or Saturday was the forecast that delighted winter sports fans today as the storm left Boston for Portland, Me.

A spell of colder weather will intervene before the next storm, the weather bureau said.

Today's snowfall, officially reported as 10 inches by the weather bureau, brought the year's total to 18 inches. Not since January, 1936, has so much snow fallen here—then 12 inches of snowfall in two days.

Boston Evening American Photo

Dalhover's Cash To Insurance Firm

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 13 (AP)—The Maryland Casualty Company of Baltimore, which held an insurance policy on the Prairie Exchange Bank of Thorpe, Wis., robbed by Brady gangsters last August, is entitled to $2631.79 found in possession of James Dalhover, Circuit Judge Dan Pyle has ruled.

U. S. to Abandon Salvage of Panay

SHANGHAI, Jan. 13 (AP)—United States naval authorities announced today that efforts to salvage the American gunboat Panay, sunk by Japanese bombs in the Yangtze river December 12, had been abandoned after the ship's safe and official papers had been recovered.

A salvage crew announced the gunboat was damaged beyond repair and her hull was abandoned.

Deal's 'King Council' Opens Battle

bor and similar administration programs, President Roosevelt through his son will ask this group to select a "spearhead" to lead the New Deal primary attack against the Hurley Democratic forces.

4—Because motivation of this program comes from the White House itself, Massachusetts primary promises to be the country's first simon-pure test of New Deal strength this year. The outcome is expected to spur or cancel the ambitions of President Roosevelt for a third term.

HARMONY IS SOUGHT

The "Crown Prince" of the New Deal administration emphasized that a "state administration in active sympathy with the aims and purposes of the national administration" is wanted.

Regarding the Massachusetts "guinea pig" primary, young Roosevelt stated:

"The primary is where the party makes its final selection. As in the past, I will support those selected by the people at the primary in the regular election campaign."

Denials were made by young Roosevelt that in jockeying for a powerful Massachusetts New Deal flag bearer the "King's council" will select him to oppose Governor Hurley.

"Definitely and emphatically I will not be a candidate for any public office in the year 1938," he asserted.

GAINS LEADERSHIP

With "Jimmie's" finger on the pulse of the Massachusetts situation through his emissaries and personal business office in Boston and his visit consolidating the state's New Deal elements, he is bound to hold a political leadership which will lead a candidacy in the nearfuture, the Evening American was told.

As the key members of the state New Deal hierarchy consider their choice of a "spearhead" candidate, they possess the important post collector's plum and the definite Massachusetts liberal strength as ammunition for their campaign.

"There may be a lot of scheming going on today for all I know," the governor said, "but I hope that some of the boys who are trying to give it to me can also take it.

"I played football for eight years and I can give it as well as take it. I am in no hurry to leave the Governor's office."

PREPARE FOR TEST

While the administration's strength was felt in this state in the Hurley victory, the steps under way now form the first actual participation by the New Deal in a Massachusetts primary to test its own power.

Making the fight more clear cut, James Roosevelt declared as he departed for Washington "the statement that the administration or myself might support a Republican candidate for the governorship is both absurd and ridiculous."

Pressure Sales' Fight Pressed By President

Seeks Curtailment Of Installment Plan Buying

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (AP)—President Roosevelt was reported today in usually reliable quarters to be negotiating in his conferences with business leaders for a curtailment of credit on installment buying.

Informed persons said he had suggested to the motor industry a tightening of sales credit in line with his previously expressed intention of eliminating "high pressure salesmanship."

This was one of the topics the President was said to have discussed Tuesday with Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., chairman of the General Motors Corporation, and four other prominent industrialists.

SLOAN DECLINES

One well-posted government official said the President had proposed that the auto industry limit its extension of credit on the purchase of cars to 25 per cent, but that Sloan had rejected the suggestion as too drastic.

Others at the conference—Ernest T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel Corporation; Lewis Brown, president of Johns-Manville; M. W. Clement, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and Colby Chester, chairman of the General Foods Corporation—were not so directly connected with the problem of installment sales.

PRODUCTION CUT

At a press conference last week, however, the President told of a steel manufacturer whose production had dropped from 90 to 28 per cent of capacity because of the slump in automobile production and uneven purchases of rails by the railroads.

Mr. Roosevelt said steel reduction had been unbalanced by railroads purchasing rails for an entire year at one time.

At the same time the President criticized the automobile industry for selling cars on a 24 months credit arrangement instead of the previous 18 months, and for overselling by telling prospective purchasers that the price was going up.

Dubinsky Still Favors CIO

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (AP)—David Dubinsky, head of a union which has 250,000 members, said today he is still staunchly in favor of the CIO in spite of his differences with John L. Lewis over internal policy.

Dubinsky said his union, the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, has no intention and has never had of withdrawing from the CIO and reiterated his conviction in the necessity of organizing unorganized workers.

"I'm CIO," he said. "I am one of the organizers of the CIO. The CIO was necessary to organize the mass production industries. But when I see that a fight is harming the cause of labor, when I see that it is damaging it, I say that it must cease."

Peace, he said, will be brought about in labor's ranks, and added:

"I feel that I've done my part by bringing the issue into the open, letting the people and the workers know what the situation is."

Mrs. Caraway Hits Lynch Bill

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (AP)—The Senate's only woman member, Mrs. Hattie Caraway of Arkansas, denounced the anti-lynching bill today as a "gratuitous insult to the South."

Wearing as usual a simple black dress and reading from a prepared speech, Mrs. Caraway said she had never "approved or condoned lynchings" and that she had "always been sick at heart" on reading of executions without trial.

She added, however, that the bill was unconstitutional and designed to destroy southern influence.

Gen. Johnson Says:

LAMMOT DU PONT Poor Jobless Witness

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13—Maybe there could have been a worse witness than Mr. Lammot duPont proved to be before the Senate Unemployment Committee, but if there ever was, the record is lost.

HUGH S. JOHNSON

His proposition is sound enough—that this slump is due to so many uncertainties hanging over business and investment—unwise laws and doubtful government policy. As long as he read from his prepared statement, it was fair sailing, but the moment Senators Murray and Byrnes went after him he cracked up.

He had made speeches advising the country what government ought to do to encourage business. He didn't seem to be able to defend the same advice before the Senators. It was astonishingly bad.

Even on the undistributed profits tax, the effect of which to paralyze business is simple and obvious, he couldn't suggest an amendment. He hadn't "given it enough thought" or hadn't "thought it through." That left him wide open to this crack right on the beezer:

"Notwithstanding the fact that you've given such little thought to that subject, you undertake to advise the people of the country and to criticize the government in some of its policies," and "isn't it a fact that ever since the inauguration of the present Administration you've been opposed to the progressive policies of this administration?" Mr. duPont didn't know what the progressive policies are.

Yes, it is true that Mr. Lammot duPont has never been able to reconcile himself to the New Deal. The first time I had anything to do with this Administration, I ran into this Mr. duPont. He didn't like the way the Recovery Act was shaping up and, through the National Association of Manufacturers and otherwise, he was doing all he could to block it. He has been doing something like that ever since. He is a guiding spirit in the Association.

Of course, that is his right but it is just about the poorest public relations stunt that could be imagined. I have never been able to see anything sinister about the duPonts. They have made a model of their own State of Delaware. Through the duPont Company and General Motors they have created more employment than any other family in the country. As Lammot pointed out in his testimony, they are spending many millions in expansion to offset this slump.

But the very fact that they are so wealthy and influential makes continued stubborn opposition to an inevitable progression in government seem anti-social even though the whole record of the family is the reverse of that.

The duPonts seem to get bad publicity breaks at every juncture and they don't take any pains to get their side of the story before the public—or if they do, they do it with boners such as Lammot's testimony.

They got a very bad press out of the Nye munitions committee hearings and they stand in the public mind as a symbol of "wicked munitions" manufacturers—or "merchants of death." As a matter of fact, the explosives end of their business is now, relatively, so small a part of the total that it would be a fine idea for them just to donate it to the Army and Navy Ordnance Departments.

If that were done, the probability is that the development of the explosives art in this country would falter, because the government would be deprived of the research and experiment attendant on the constantly widening use of commercial explosives. But it would accord with the trend of public opinion toward the nationalization of munitions manufacture and it would erase a smudge from one of the most distinguished of American families.

For it is a distinguished family with a fine record of public service in both peace and war—simple and democratic people whose principal difficulty seems to have been that everything they touch turns into money.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

"Washington Merry-Go-Round," by Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen, sprightly and informative column on the inside activities of political Washington, is now a daily feature of the Boston Evening American. It will also appear in the Boston Sunday Advertiser every Sunday.

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Barring some unforeseen hitch, Hollywood is the next to be tagged "it" in the administration's drive against monopolies.

The decision to tackle the big movie distributors and producers was no sudden one. They have been under quiet scrutiny by the Justice Department for nearly a year.

Cause of the inquiry was numerous complaints by independent theater operators that the big distributors were discriminating against them by refusing to let them have "first run" pictures. These new feature films are given to theaters owned or controlled by the big boys and the independents are left out on the limb.

In moving on the Hollywood moguls the Justice Department reversed its previous policy toward them. For many years, the department had an arrangement with "Czar" Will Hays whereby complaints against the industry were referred to him for adjustment. But when trust-busting Bob Jackson was made head of the Anti-Monopoly Division he put an end to this.

Under Jackson a complaint is handled as the basis for possible legal action. There have been no soft-pedalling out-of-court negotiations.

The suit against the movie satraps may introduce a new anti-monopoly technique. In view of Judge Geiger's dismissal of a Milwaukee grand jury just as it was about to vote on indictments against the Big Three motor makers, government lawyers may sidestep a grand jury altogether. Instead, they would take the movie case directly to a federal court with a request for an injunction against alleged monopolistic practices.

Some of the government legalists advocate an even more drastic course, namely an injunction requiring the producers to get rid of their movie houses.

FLYING FIRST LADY—Someone remarked to an airline official, "You must be thankful for the flying First ady. Gives you a lot of free advertising."

The reply was: "I wish Mrs. Roosevelt would never come near an airplane again. That lady gives us heart failure."

If anything should happen to a plane carrying Mrs. Roosevelt, the damage to passenger aviation would be inestimable. And the First Lady, usually acting on impulse, gives the airline no time to make a special selection of crew and equipment.

OPPOSITION TO FRANK—One unique feature of the Roosevelt administration is opposition by Jewish friends of the New Deal to Jewish appointments. Latest instance of this occurred in connection with the SEC appointment of Jerome Frank, hard-hitting ex-counsel of the AAA.

Frank's name was proposed for Securities-Exchange Commissioner by some very powerful non-Jews, among them Judge Pecora (Italian descent) and SEC Chairman Douglas (Scotch), who made a special trip to Hyde Park last fall to push it. Joe Kennedy, a staunch Catholic, also urged the Frank appointment upon Roosevelt.

But Barney Baruch, heavy contributor to the Democratic Party and wealthy Jewish leader, interceded personally with the President and did his best to block it. One other high Jewish member of the administration looked askance at Frank's appointment, but Roosevelt, who always felt Frank got a raw deal when ousted from the AAA, ignored their protests.

Note—What came nearer blocking Frank's appointment than the opposition of his co-religionists was the attitude of Mrs. Frank. She was adamantly opposed to his abandoning a lucrative New York law practice and returning to Washington.

MERRY-GO-ROUND—Senator Borah is a daily morning visitor at the Washington Zoo . . . Washington saw its first Japanese shrapnel when two tiny pieces were probed from the leg of J. Hall Paxton, Panay survivor, in the Naval Hospital. Paxton, U. S. Embassy Secretary in Nanking, flew back at the request of State Department officials who wanted a word-of-mouth version of the bombing . . .

Young Hearst and His Bride Will Honeymoon in Nassau

Publisher's Son Wed To Georgia Girl In Atlanta

(Special to Boston Evening American)

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 13—Miss Catherine Wood Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morton Reck Campbell, became the bride of Randolph Apperson Hearst, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, at a beautiful ceremony taking place here yesterday at the Sacred Heart Catholic Church.

The impressive service was performed by the Very Rev. James T. Reilly, S. M., in the presence of a fashionable assemblage of Atlantans and out-of-town guests.

The program of nuptial music was presented by Vincent Hurley, organist.

BEAUTIFUL WEDDING

On each side of the chancel was a group arrangement of palms. In front of each grouping stood a tall white column topped with a large Grecian urn holding calla lilies.

Placed on either side of the columns were seven-branched cathedral candelabra with tall tapers.

The ushers were Herbert Porter, Dr. Floyd McRae, John Owen Campbell and Stephen Campbell, brothers of the bride; Thomas B. Paine, William K. Jenkins and Hamilton Lokey.

They were followed by the matron of honor, Mrs. Samuel Russell Bridges, Jr.

The bride's attendants were gowned alike in stunning models of turquoise blue taffeta fashioned with new corseted girdle effect. They wore attractive veils of matching tulle and carried bouquets of acacia, yellow roses, bronze snapdragons and talisman roses made in cascade group effect.

BROTHERS ATTEND

Her veil was of tulle caught on her hair with a tiara effect coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a reverse heart-shaped bouquet centered with three white orchids and encircled in gardenias, this in turn [illegible] with valley lilies and completed by a beaded cascade of valley lilies.

Mrs. Morton Reck Campbell, mother of the bride, was gowned in [illegible] blue and wore matching hat.

HONEYMOON BEGINS

Mrs. William Randolph Hearst of New York City, mother of the bridegroom, wore a Lanvin model of black [illegible] and blue metal cloth. Her small hat was of black felt and she wore a cluster of deep purple orchids.

Following the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Morton Reck Campbell entertained at a reception at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Campbell were the bride and bridegroom, Mrs. William Randolph Hearst and the bridal party.

The bride traveled in a [illegible] ensemble, the dress being of grey crepe. Her accessories were all in a matching shade of grey.

Wedded

Hearst Twin With Georgia Bride

Randolph Apperson Hearst, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, and his bride, the former Miss Catherine W. Campbell of Atlanta, Ga., shown just after their marriage at fashionable church ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morton R. Campbell of Atlanta. The couple plan a honeymoon in Nassau, to which they will fly by plane from Miami.

New Star Found, 3000 Times Size of Sun

Chicago 'U' Scientists Fix Diameter at 2 Billion Miles

CHICAGO, Jan. 13 (AP)—A new star 3000 times larger than the sun was charted on astronomical maps today.

It is the larger component of the giant star Epsilon Aurigae and its existence was suspected in 1899 by the late Dr. Edward Brant Frost, director of the University of Chicago's Yerkes Observatory at Williams Bay, Wis.

VISIBLE TO EYE

The discovery of the binary star—largest thus far found—was announced yesterday by Dr. Otto Struve, director of the observatory, and his associates, Profs. Gerald P. Kuiper and Bengt Stromgren.

Dr. Struve regarded the discovery as one of the observatory's outstanding achievements in its 40-year history. The star's existence was disclosed by the spectograph and infra red photography.

The new component of Epsilon Aurigae rotates around the latter, which is visible to the naked eye north of Orion. The larger unit of the double star was described as red in color and having a comparatively cool temperature of 1300 degrees Centigrade.

DEEP YELLOW

Its diameter is 2,000,000,000 miles and it is 3000 light years away from the earth. A light year is six trillion miles. The binary star would encompass all the planets as far as Uranus, with only Neptune and Pluto outside its area, if it were placed in the center of the solar system.

The visible component is deep yellow in color, with a temperature of 6000 degrees, approximately that of the sun. When it passes behind the larger star every 27 years its light is reduced in visibility by half.

Upton Man Found Dead by Monoxide

HUDSON, Jan. 13—Thomas F. Hart, 39, former exalted ruler of Hudson Lodge of Elks, was found dead here in his parked automobile near his summer camp at Lake Boone.

Police said death was due to carbon monoxide poisoning. His home was in Howe street, Upton.

Fear for Dean's Life

Minister Lives Without Food

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 13 (AP)—Friends of the Very Rev. Israel Harding Noe waited fearfully today as the 46-year-old clergyman neared the end of his second week without food or water.

Although the dean of fashionable St. Mary's Episcopal cathedral has been carrying on a full schedule of work, physicians among his friends have expressed belief his collapse may come at any hour. He has told them what he is doing "is a spiritual demonstration beyond their comprehension."

Friends said Dean Noe had subsisted all of last year on oranges alone, starting Dec. 23, 1936. Since January 2 he has taken only the tiny wafer and sip of wine of the communion service he conducts three times weekly.

WASTED TO A SHADOW

A man of unusually robust health at the time he began his demonstration, he is now only a shadow of the heavy-set, ruddy-cheeked clergyman of former years.

"The story will come out in due course when my whole philosophy of life has been worked out and lived out and that will be time enough for all who are interested in the fact that man can, here and now, put on the fullness of the godhead bodily, provided he is a willing instrument in the Father's hands," the dean said.

"In the meantime, what I am working out is a purely personal matter of a pioneering nature and relates solely to the development of my own personality but primarily for the other person's good in order that he might be shown a new way of life.

"ALONE WITH THE FATHER"

"I have no doubt of the ultimate outcome for whatsoever the Father gives us to do He gives us the strength and power with which to do it. In the meantime, I am living this out, not in the newspapers but in the private holy of holies alone with the Father, and am carrying on a full schedule of work and all I ask is to be allowed the privilege to work out this philosophy without the undue interference of those who are interested only from an uncomprehending viewpoint and not the standpoint of eternal truth.

"What I am working out I am working out from a purely biological and medical standpoint, from that new approach to it which all the leaders of medical science have not fully comprehended."

Dean Noe would not elaborate [illegible]

"[illegible] live a wholly spiritual life in an earthly environment, existing entirely through his spiritual relation to an all-sufficient God.

WIFE DENIED DIVORCE

Friends of the dean are divided over whether to take him to a hospital in the event of collapse and feed him intravenously or to allow him "to give his life for an experiment in which he believes as deeply as any scientist has ever believed."

Those same friends had hoped that reconciliation two weeks before Christmas with his wife, the former Ellen M. Cambios, member of a prominent Virginia family, and he return to him with their two children might cause a change in his plans.

The dean and his wife had been separated since 1931 when Mrs. Noe sued for divorce, charging desertion. The divorce was denied. The Supreme Court refused to review the lower court's decision. Mrs. Noe charged the dean had grown cold to her.

At the time of the reconciliation Dean Noe issued a statement concerning marriage, which he said embraced, first, a life of generation, and afterwards, a life "of regeneration." The first he said, was accomplished when their union was blessed with children.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 13 (AP)—Lupe Velez made one of her frequent announcements today.

It was not a new one for Lupe . . .

"There will be no divorce. Johnny and I are fine friends. We live under the same roof, yes—but neither of us could afford to keep this place alone. He does what he wants. I do what I want. We may be happy as friends."

Kills Daughter, Self in Strange Love Tragedy

Notes Found in Girl's Purse Reveal Love of Father

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Jan. 13 (AP)—Death—recorded today as murder and suicide—ended the strange love of a father and daughter who met only recently in this Westmoreland County mining village, then learned their relationship.

The girl's mother, Pearl Hollis, found the bodies, side by side and both shot in the head, in the living room of her home yesterday.

Dr. H. Albert McMurray, coroner, identified the dead as 47-year-old Nelson Meese and his 17-year-old daughter, Nellie. McMurray listed the deaths as murder and suicide.

The mother said Meese had not seen his daughter since her birth until they met here recently, and that the two had then fallen in love. He said two letters found in the girl's purse led him to this conclusion.

LETTERS FOUND

One, mailed last December 21 from Brownsville, Pa., read:

"It is going to be hard for me to leave you now. You may not believe this, but you are the only person I ever saw that I really liked and you turn out to be my daughter."

The other, dated last November 15, read:

"You have filled a space for me that has been empty for many years. You won't have to tell me in words that you like me. I know you do. I am sure you know how I feel about you."

The coroner said Nellie was born to Meese and Pearl Hollis. The girl lived with her mother.

Coroner McMurray recalled that he was attending physician at Nellie's birth 17 years ago at Youngwood, near Greensburg.

The mother, he said, was then unwed, but later married a man named Hollis and lived for some time in Ohio, but was divorced and returned to this village.

Japs Plan Fleet Superior to U. S.

Nippon's Navy Forges Ahead Rapidly as Roosevelt Seeks More Warships

By ROBERT G. NIXON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

(Copyright, 1938)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13—Japan has secretly launched a naval rearmament program of vast proportions aimed at wiping out America's superiority on the high seas, International News Service learned today.

If the United States was forced to carry a naval war to Japan and fight her in her own waters, Nippon's navy would be equal, if not slightly superior, to the American fleet, high naval authorities here privately concede.

Unless the United States makes heavy new additions to its fleet in all categories, with Japanese naval armament forging ahead rapidly, the naval superiority America has held for many years over the land of the rising sun will be at an end.

This realization, International News Service is able to disclose, is one of the fundamental reasons for President Roosevelt's determination to call upon Congress for the largest national defense expenditures in peacetime history for the 1939 fiscal year. Of an estimated $1,200,000,000 defense budget, including supplemental authorizations, the larger portion by far is expected to be used for new warship construction.

Her defense zones, navy yards and naval stations are kept under armed guard. The workmen must live within the zones and are not permitted to leave or communicate with persons outside.

Despite the secrecy surrounding Japan's defenses, disturbing reports of a huge new naval program have reached Washington. According to these reports Japan, under the third fleet replenishment program, began laying down last July 1 four new 45,000-ton battleships mounting 16-inch guns and 63 other warships. These include five aircraft carriers, seven cruisers, 43 destroyers and eight submarines.

Before expiration of the treaties December 31, 1936, Japan, under the 5-5-3 ratio, had nine battleships, four aircraft carriers with two others under construction, 12 heavy cruisers, 20 light cruisers and four under construction, 98 destroyers and 14 building, 77 submarines and three building. Altogether she had a little over 200 warships with a total of 824,866 tons displacement.

This compared to the American navy of 15 battleships; six aircraft carriers, of which two still are under construction; 18 heavy cruisers; 19 light cruisers; 197 destroyers, of which 158 are over-age, with an additional 55 under construction; and 83 submarines, of which 54 are over-age, with 17 new ones building. Since then, two new 35,000-ton battleships have been authorized and construction begun on one. The total American fleet of 402 warships displaces 1,428,050 tons.

Japs Hear 40,000 Soviet Troops Are Entering Outer Mongolia

Copyright, 1938.

SHANGGHAI, Jan. 22 (INS)—Forty thousand Soviet Russian troops were reported entering outer Mongolia today as Japanese forces, moving from the captured cities of Tsingtao and Tsining, sought to strengthen their grip on rich Shantung Province.

Reports of the Soviet troop movements into Mongolia seeped into Shanghai from various Chinese sources. If they prove correct, they may herald the most dramatic and far-reaching developments witnessed in the Far East in many decades.

There was no official confirmation of the reported Soviet military infiltration, but the advices received here came from reliable sources.

Furthermore, it was considered of utmost significance that the reports arose close on the heels of Japanese charges that Russian-manufactured war planes and Soviet pilots have been added to the Chinese air force.

Some advices indicated that the Soviet troops, after crossing the Mongolian border, were filtering, by small groups, away from their concentration points, en route to unreported destinations.

Since the beginning of the Sino-Japanese hostilities, Japanese military officials have taken elaborate precautions to prevent the possibility of Soviet military aid to China.

Japanese columns drove a wedge between North China and the Outer Mongolian Republic, which was established with the aid of the U. S. S. R., while the constantly strained relations between Tokyo and Moscow have been studded with Nipponese warnings to the Soviets, as well as to other nations, to "keep hands off China."

Russia Plans Steel Fort Line To Protect Newly Found Oil

MOSCOW, Jan. 13 (INS)—Discovery of rich Soviet oil deposits in Far Eastern Siberia was announced today, and gave Russian military officials fresh cause for interest in the Sino-Japanese war.

The Soviet public was officially informed that the fabulous deposits are situated near Siberia's Japanese-controlled frontiers.

High excitement here followed the announcement, particularly among military leaders, who already are making vast preparations for any developments that may arise from the Nipponese military campaign in China.

The discovery was described here as of "colossal national economic importance." The deposits stretch from strategic Lake Baikal in central Siberia to the Pacific Coast—some 1500 miles to the east.

This discovery by Soviet geologists, it was asserted, may force Russia to build a new, gigantic defense line of steel-concrete fortifications in the Far East to protect the new-found wealth.

Finding of the oil is believed to have necessitated a change in the entire Russian far eastern defense system. It is believed it will result in dispatches of enormous military reinforcements to Marshal Vasily Blucher's far eastern Soviet forces, and may compel construction of heavy defense lines along the entire Siberian-Manchukuoan frontier.

Already irritated by Japan's steady advance in China, Soviet authorities are believed preparing to take precautions lest the oil deposits tempt the Japanese into expanding their armed drive on the Asiatic continent.

Bickford Hurls Bribe Charge--Names Hays

In all of this, Bickford steadfastly refused to reveal any names unless the joint rules committee would give him the right to summons witnesses to substantiate what he said.

On the other hand, he promised the committee members:

"If you give me the power to summons witnesses, I'll blow the lid off the state."

The committee adjourned abruptly. It is to meet again tomorrow. Irate committee members went into an executive huddle.

Tomorrow, when the hearing is resumed, the Boston Evening American reliably was informed, a flat demand will be made upon Bickford that he name the Senator who, he says, received $2500. If he still refuses to name him, action will be taken to cite him for "contempt of the General Court."

HINT COURT ACTION

An alternative, or "short cut," it also was stated, may be an application to the Supreme Judicial Court for an order commanding Bickford to answer.

If such an order were issued, and he refused to answer, he might be held in contempt of the Supreme Court, rather than of the "General Court"—the Legislature. This, some say, would avoid a lot of legislative red tape.

Bickford tangled with the committee on the question of being given the right to summons witnesses almost immediately as soon as the hearing opened.

He named as some of the witnesses he wanted to summons "as a starter"—

Governor Hurley.

Members of the State Racing Commission.

Martin Hays, who is a former Republican member of the legislature, now reputed heavily interested in dog tracks.

Robert J. Bottomly.

State Representative Edward B. Bacigalupo, of Boston.

James B. Eagan.

He said also he wanted to subpoena certain books and records of the National Shawmut Bank and the First National Bank, and also the lists of stockholders and employes of various dog tracks.

HEARING JAMMED

The committee's hearing room, Room 436 of the State House, was crowded to capacity, even standing room being at a premium. Senator Samuel H. Wragg, president of the Senate presided. Bickford was accompanied by Attorney Clarence A. Barnes, of Mansfield, who, e announced, was his counsel.

He gave his age as 35, said his home is in Medford, and that he is "editor-in-chief" of the Colonial Network News Service."

Questioning, by Speaker Cahill, and Bickford's answers, then proceeded, as follows:

Q—You are alleged to have stated that members of the Legislature with few exceptions could be bought for anything from $100 to a pound of tea. Did you make such a statement? A—I did.

Q—When and where? A—At the Worcester Rotary Club a week ago Thursday, and at other places and times throughout the state.

Q—Do you know of your own knowledge of any instance in which any member of the present legislature was bought?

Bickford started to hem and haw, and Cahill demanded:

"I want a yes or no answer."

"Yes," Bickford said.

WANTS RACE BOOKS

Q—Are you willing to name any member of the present legislature that you say has been bought? A—Not unless I have the right to summon witnesses.

Cahill switched abruptly away from the subject, and asked:

"Will you present such facts to us as are in your possession?"

"I have presented those facts to you gentlemen, already," Bickford retorted.

Q—What were they? A—Many member of the legislature have been paid by the dog track operators.

Q—Who are they? A—I refuse to answer unless I have the privilege of summons.

Q—Then as far as this committee is concerned, you are not able to present a single, solitary fact of your own knowledge? A—That's not so. I just demand the same privileges and rights under the Constitution that you have exercised in summoning me here. The Constitution guarantees to all men the right of trial by jury, with both sides presented, and I ask the right to summon witnesses to prove my statements.

Q—You have made allegations against the General Court, and a man of your knowledge, if he has any honor, will not make declarations of such nature outside of his own knowledge. I ask that you present to this committee a prima facie case anyway—not that you prove your case to us as reasonable men, but just prima facie evidence your charges can be proven. A—I demand the right of summoning witnesses.

Q—We do not want any cock and bull story about summonses and so forth. What we want is your knowledge. Have you a single, solitary fact that you yourself can present? A—Yes.

Q—Then let's have it.

At this point, Attorney Barnes indicated to the committee that he desired to confer with Bickford, his client. A short recess was granted. Upon reconvening, Cahill resumed questioning:

Q—Let us have your evidence. A—Mr. Chairman, I have here ingerprints and records of arest and penitentiary sentences f people who are conducting dog racks in the state of Massachuetts.

LASH ON SUMMONSES

Senator Wragg interrupted:

"I wonder if you would read he order that brought you here, Mr Bickford, and if you will refer to it there is nothing in that order about dog tracks or dog track operators. The order calls you here to discuss charges you made againsts members of this general court."

"The right of summons which I am seeking, and the proof of my charges, are contingent on this," Bickford said.

Speaker Cahill said:

"We are interested in any picture or fingerprints or anything you have that bears on these charges, but we're not interested in fingerprints and pictures of all the rogues in Massachusetts.

"Will you name any legislator who received money?"

EFUSES TO ANSWER

Q—Will you tell where the episode took place? A—I refuse to answer unless I have the right of summons.

Q—When it took place? A—I refuse to answer unless I have the right of summons.

Q—How it took place? A—I refuse to answer unless I have the right of summons.

And here, Bickford added:

"I have all the riffraff in Massachusetts connected with dog tracks who have corrupted this State Legislature."

Cahill said:

"You have made a charge. You did veil your charge behind the fact that you said 'few exceptions.' Now if you will not name the members of this Legislature who are dishonest, will you name the ones that are honest, as you have indicted all members with 'few exceptions.' Who are the exceptions?"

"Not too many," was Bickford's reply.

Q—Well, if there are not too many, it is not too difficult to name them. A—I know that there are honest men as well as dishonest men in the Legislature. There are many who are honest here today.

Q—Well, will you not name the 'few exceptions' who are honest? Then we will know who is dishonest. Will you indicate who you think are honest?

SAYS HE HAS FACTS

At the conclusion of this recess Bickford said:

"I'm a news man. I'm not a lawyer. I have plenty of facts, but I don't know how to present them."

Cahill retorted:

"I've known 'Home Run' Barnes for many years, and will say you have eminent counsel.

"You've been going up and down the State making a lot of statements about members of the Legislature. Why, my own wife asked me where my pound of tea was!"

'United Ireland' Question May Balk Parley

DeValera Is Expected To Raise Issue in London Meeting

LONDON, Jan. 13 (AP)—The question of a united Ireland may be the stumbling block in historic conversations of British and Irish statesmen to begin here Monday.

Eamon DeValera is expected to raise the question. Unification of Ireland (formerly the Irish Free State) and Ulster (Northern Ireland) long has been DeValera's ambition.

The conversations are to deal mainly with questions of defense and trade.

Ulster reaction today emphatically let De Valera know that any attempt to fuse the six Ulster counties with Ireland would be resisted strongly.

(The Irish Free State became Ireland in English and Eire in Gaelic under the new constitution adopted last summer and effective December 29).

The Dublin Irish Times suggested editorially that political problems be divorced from economic issues, thus assuring an end to trade war between the two, but De Valeria's party paper, the Irish Press, said he must stand firm "on principle" — presumably meaning ultimately to bring Ulster under the new constitution.

The Northern Whig in Belfast, North Ireland, observed that "if De Valera points a revolver at Britain—and at Ulster—he will receive a speedy answer.

"Britain is well aware of a determination of Northern Ireland to oppose to the utmost the fusion of Ulster with the south."

The Belfast Nationalist Irish News, however, said that "removal of artificial barrier between Irishmen and Ireshmen in their own country is essential if negotiations between England and Eire are to lead to better understanding."

Revere Penalty Threatened

Warning that refusal would mean a heavy penalty assessment District Attorney William J. Foley today ordered the mayor and city council of Revere to make up the deficiency in the Revere school budget of 1937.

Foley's decision to support the Revere school committee in its dispute with Mayor James M. O'Brien and the city council gave new hope to Revere teachers that a 20 per cent pay cut for the past year will be restored to them.

The mayor and council cut out $60,000 from the school committee's budget of $701,000 last year. The budget was intended to cover teachers' salaries, return of the pay cut and making of necessary repairs.

Hoover to Sail Feb. 8 For Visit to Belgium

Special to the Boston Evening American

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 13—The Belgian ambassador at Washington has transmitted from the Belgian government an invitation to former President Herbert Hoover to revisit the scene of his Herculean labors during the World War, it was learned today.

The former chief executive has accepted, and will sail from New York for Belgium on February 8th, it was announced at his home on the Stanford campus, Palo Alto.

The invitation tendered through Ambassador Robert Von Der Straenponthoz stated the Belgian people wish "to have this opportunity to express to you their sentiments of deep gratitude for the eminent services you have rendered our country and to assure you of their unalterable attachment."

Participating in the invitation are the Brussels, Ghent, Liege, Louvain and Colonial universities, engineering schools and civic organizations of Belgium.

"POLITICS" DENIED

At the Hoover home it was stated the visit "has no political implications."

For five years during and after the war Hoover directed the Belgian Relief Commission which provided food supplies not only for Belgium's 7,000,000 people, but for 3,000,000 homeless and stricken inhabitants of Northern France.

The Hoover commission has left a heritage of rebuilded social, educational and scientific facilities in Belgium and the Belgian people repeatedly have sought his return on a visit. The late King Albert on several occasions invited Hoover to revisit the scene of his wartime work so that Belgium might adequately express her appreciation.

When the Belgian Relief Commission's work was finished, Hoover and Belgian leaders determined all accumulated profits and unexpended charitable moneys should be devoted to educational, scientific and social purposes in Belgium.

It was disclosed today that since then approximately $90,000,000 has been expended from the relief fund residue.

Endowment and equipment of Belgian universities have been rehabilitated—the Louvain library has been rebuilt. Brussels University has been transformed into a modern suburban institution, with entirely new holdings and equipment.

Various institutions of scientific research and scholarships have been established and endowed. Among them the "C. R. B. Educational Foundation," of which Hoover has been chairman for the past 16 years. This is a fund used for the exchange of students, professors and literature between the United States and Belgium.

Hoover and his colleagues served on the commission without pay.

Ford Thankful He Was Forced To 'Sit Up'

(Editor's note: This is the second of three articles analyzing and describing the Henry Ford of today. For the first time in 15 years Mr. Ford consented to permit a reporter to spend an entire day with him, from 8:30 in the morning until 6:30 at night with no restrictions.

By PAUL GALLICO

International News Service Staff Correspondent

(Copyright, 1938)

DEARBORN, Mich., Jan. 13.—Henry Ford's reaction, not only to the NLRB but to government forces aligned against him, are typical. He thanks them for making him sit up a little.

"That's what I'm saying to those fellows down there in Washington, all of them. I'm thanking 'em. I'm saying thank you right now for bucking us up. Not that we needed it, or were letting down any, but it does you good every now and then to get a little jog anyway.

"Kinda sharpens you up, don't it? We know we're right and they're wrong. We know it. And right always prevails in the end, don't it?"

Ford made the statement, definitely and positively, during the course of the day the writer spent with him, beginning with chapel in Greenfield Village, stretching through long hours in his engineering laboratories, and winding up late in the evening in the office of W. J. Cameron here where he sat around for an hour with his feet up on a desk, talking about things that interested him.

HENRY FORD

SHOWS TRACTOR

From the village we came back to the laboratory where Ford had his new cheap, light farm tractor set up.

A group of tractor distributors and farm implement manufacturers were there looking over the queer, spidery machine that looks like one of those old-fashioned tricycles called "boneshakers," and which Ford hopes will help to bring prosperity back to the farmer.

It is impossible to be with Ford very long without noticing that the prosperity of the country (and with it, of course, the prosperity of his company) is in his heart and mind.

It comes popping out at all odd moments. It came to the surface while he was telling the merits of his new tractor to the men who will distribute and manufacture it. He considers the machine a definite contribution. Other manufacturers will be allowed to make the tractor in quantities. Ford, of course, will sell them the engine.

He was carrying around a clipping of a recent editorial by Elsie Robinson, and quoting from it, particularly the finish—"No starving Americans? That's just dandy. But how about a nation of helpless people?"

Striding around his tractor he would keep on going back to the bankers and financiers who, in his opinion, were responsible for conditions.

"We've got to bring this fine, great country of ours back," he said. "We've got to get people something to do. Get them something to do." He walked around the tractor again, and repeated, "Get 'em something to do!"

EXPLAINS GADGET

"High prices are all wrong. You don't get prosperity with high prices. We want high wages and low prices. That's what we're working on. You can't tell me you can make any system or country work with low wages and high prices, and high wages with high prices don't mean anything when the prices eat up the wages and don't leave anything over.

"We've got to bring prices down, make things cheap and sell a lot of 'em. That's what we're going to do with this tractor. We're going to sell it to the farmer at a price at which he can afford to buy and enable him to make a profit. Then he'll be able to buy a car again."

He explained a gadget to one of his visitors and then stepped back from the machine.

"We've got to do something with that wheel there. The next one'll be a lot better. Light—that's what you want. Light and powerful. Traction. That's how a cat gets up a tree. It's light and it's got claws to hook in and pull with."

Later he sat tilted back in his chair—he always gets into a comfortable position when he sits, like all tall, lanky men, and fanned with the farm implement men. He had known them for years.

One of his men drove the tractor about on the smooth, highly polished floor, snorting and chaffering and making quick, weird turns and backs, in and out of the dismounted motors and engine parts set up for experimentation in that particular corner of the laboratory.

RAILROAD FUN

Ford got back onto the subject uppermost in his mind again, government interference. He talked about the railroad he and his son had been forced to sell after improving it, the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railroad.

"I wish you coulda seen that railroad when Edsel and I went down to look it over. We found one train down there by the river bank, sunk right down in the mud. A lot of those rails looked like corkscrews.

"We put in light equipment and a lot of improvements until the Interstate Commerce Commission made us quit. We had a lot of fun with it first, though, and we showed that with light equipment, and raising wages, we could make it pay. We showed we were right about that."

The tractor demonstration, his new toy and the apple of his eye, had taken up the forenoon. We went in to lunch in the restaurant in the far wing of the laboratories, engineers, salesmen, manufacturers and all.

(In the final article of the series tomorrow, Henry Ford talks on farming and industry, the car of tomorrow, the problems of manufacturers today, his plans to absorb farm surplus, his ideas on character building, and his wage theories.)

Listen, World!

Why Are We Helpless?

By ELSIE ROBINSON

(Reprinted from the Boston Evening American of Friday, Jan. 7, 1938)

Things are happening in this America which puzzle me . . . which make me feel angry and frightened . . .

Perhaps it's because I'm so tired. For the last two weeks I've spent every hour I could spare from my work sewing. Pounding the treadle of an old-fashioned sewing machine—turning out endless bundles of flannelette nightgowns, underslips, house dresses.

Why didn't I buy the things ready made? For one thing, I've been too far away from store counters—in the backwoods. For another it's beyond my purse. Figure as you may, "ready-mades" aren't as cheap as home-mades—not if you buy by the yard.

So I've been sewing. And wondering. There was one family in particular. Six youngsters—the oldest eleven, the youngest a baby of nine months—and a mother and father. Not a pair of shoes or a stitch of underwear in the house. Three little girls going to school through mountain snow—barefoot. Yes, the town folk had sent out some hand-me-downs. But the mother can't sew.

* * *

"The Missis can't sew . . . says it's cheaper to buy store stuff." Take any trail through the mountains or plains or little valley towns and you'll hear that same refrain. Everywhere, heaps of leftovers . . . "But maw can't sew . . . doesn't know how to cut 'em over."

And the men are getting to be about as bad. These new trailer camps—clutters of Dust Bowl refugees—makeshift shacks of government workers . . . the new generation that's growing up on relief . . . the boys are as bad as the girls. All of them able to tinker with automobiles—but that lets them out. Can't build a chicken house or roof a cabin . . . hang a door or shape a window frame.

* * *

Once—not so long ago—you'd ride the better part of a week before you'd find an American, male or female, who wasn't handy with his fingers. Now they answer such a question with a snicker or yawn. Sew? Why should they—when there's always ready-mades? Build? What's the idea—when there's always relief?

"NO ONE SHALL STARVE IN AMERICA!"

Remember how heartening that promise sounded, when we first heard it, back in '32? And the gaunt faces lighting with joy . . . and the hungry flesh quivering with hope?

"NOBODY STARVE"—a blessed promise! But I'm beginning to wonder, now, if there aren't things worse than thirst and more shameful than hunger.

A nation of helpless hands . . . Empty stomachs because "the missis can't cook" . . . bare backs because "the missis can't sew" . . . roofless shacks because "dad usta be a clerk, but now he's on relief." A NATION ON RELIEF! Is or isn't that worse than starvation?

* * *

For five years, now, I've sewed like that. Going up and down the mountains—out over the desert. Going into mining camps of 21 families, the new gypsy-American breed, where not one wife has ever had a sewing machine or could make a shirt on a bet.

More families like that this year than there were the year before. More such families the year before than the year before that.

* * *

Nations are built on different things . . . different standards and ideals. Old world nations were built on educated classes, sweating masses. A good enough system for those who like it.

But our forefathers didn't like it. They didn't believe in nonsweaters, educated or otherwise. They built on DEMOCRACY and INDEPENDENCE and SELF-RESPECT. Everyone doing his share. Every man able and proud to build his own chicken house, plough his own field. Every woman able and proud to sew her own skirt and cook her own stew. And now? Fill in the blanks yourself.

Government? I do not know a thing about it. I'd make a mess of it if I tried. But you bet your last nickel on this—IF I WERE HANDING OUT RELIEF, NO WOMAN WOULD GET A CENT UNTIL SHE'D ENROLLED IN A COOKING AND SEWING COURSE . . . NO MAN SHOULD HAVE A DIME UNTIL HE'D SQUARED OFF WITH A HAMMER AND SAW.

No starving Americans? That's just dandy. BUT HOW ABOUT A NATION OF HELPLESS PEOPLE?"

House Passes Food, Drug Bill

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (INS)—The Lea bill, broadening power of the Federal Trade Commission to ban unfair competition in interest of the public and giving it supervision over food and drug advertising, was passed by the House by a vote of 107 to 10.

A stiff fight was staged over the advertising sections, with a minority group demanding that the food and drug bureau of the Department of Agriculture retain this control.

The measure, which passed the Senate last year in a different form, was ready to go to conference today.

The advertising sections brands as "false advertising" one which "is misleading in a material respect" in the sale of foods, drugs, devices and cosmetics. Penalties up to a year's imprisonment, with $10,000 fine are provided.

Bobcat, Oregon Woman's Pet

REDMOND, Ore. (INS)—Friends of Mrs. Lyda Ross, aged 86, don't know whether she's an optimist or whether she's "tired of it all." She has a 2-year-old bobcat for a pet.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

MRS. ESTELLE M. WATSON.
Tells About First "Trade Nights"

CROWDS JAM COURT TO HEAR 'MATE-TRADE' DETAILS

Mrs. Watson was on the witness stand battling divorce action brought by her husband, Calvin M. Watson, 32-year-old Topsfield tree surgeon.

This suit is being heard in connection with a divorce suit brought by Mrs. Lee against Raymond S. Lee, 31, a Beverly chauffeur. Watson names Lee as the man who allegedly broke up the Watson home, while Mrs. Lee names Mrs. Watson in the other suit.

STARTED IN 1936

As during yesterday's hearing Judge O'Brien, presiding, frequently interrupted today's examination of Mrs. Watson and other witnesses either to question them himself or to express his disgust at certain phases of the case.

When Mrs. Watson took the stand, Judge O'Brien halted her counsel, Attorney Thomas Henry, almost at the start and told him to eliminate all non-essentials and get down to the issues. Henry launched directly into actions of the four principals in the case as testified to by Mrs. Watson.

Q—After you became acquainted with the Lees, did they call at your home? A—Yes.

Q—You and your husband had a habit of calling at the Lees' house? A—Yes.

Q—When did it start? A—The spring of 1936.

Q—Does your husband drink? A—Yes.

COURT'S LIQUOR VIEW

Q—On the occasions the Lees were at your house did you spend the evening in, or go out, or what was the program? A—Sometimes we spent the evenings inside, together. Other times we went out.

Q—When you served refreshments was it liquor?

Judge O'Brien interrupted here to say:

"People may take a drink and still their standards of morality would be proper. I'm not so narrow as to believe that if a person takes a drink he would have no standards of morality. And I supplement that by saying I don't take a drink."

Q—When did the Lees start staying over night at your house? A—July of 1936.

ALL 4 IN ONE BED

Q—What happened the first night they stayed there? A—We had had a party. It broke up kind of late, about 1:30 in the morning. The Lees stayed on another half hour; that was about 2 o'clock. Mrs. Lee said it was rather late to go home and I said, 'Well you can stay here. I have a guest room.' The four of us then went upstairs to my bedroom and talked a little while longer. The four of us lay down crosswise on the bed, I with my husband and Mrs. Lee with her husband, and we went to bed.

Judge O'Brien: "All four of you in one bed?"

Mrs. Watson: "Yes."

Judge O'Brien: "Sleeping?"

Mrs. Watson: "Yes."

Judge O'Brien: "All night?"

Mrs. Watson: "Yes."

FIRST NIGHT OF SWAP

Attorney Henry again questioned the witness:

Q—When was the next time the Lees stayed over night? A—Two weeks later.

Q—Kindly tell just what took place? A—We had had another party. Mrs. Lee again said it was rather late and asked to stay again and I said yes. We all went upstairs. Mrs. Lee said, "Are the four of us going to sleep together again?" I said, "No, I was too cramped the other time."

Q—Well, what happened that night? A—I went into the bathroom to undress. When I came out I found my husband and Mrs. Lee in bed together in the other room. I said to my husband, "What are you doing in bed with Mrs. Lee?" My husband said he was going to sleep with her and told me to go in and sleep with Mr. Lee. I said, "Well, that isn't right. I don't want to do that." My husband said, "You're just a wet blanket. Go on in. Mr. Lee won't hurt you." So I went in the other room and went to bed with Mr. Lee.

Q—Was there any intimacy between you and Mr. Lee that night? —No, sir.

THEY SWAPPED AGAIN

Q—What happened a week later? A—The same thing happened as the week before. Mrs. Lee suggested to stay over night. Mrs. Lee slept with my husband and I slept with Mr. Lee.

Q—When was that? A—The third week in July.

Q—At some time the Lees went down to the Cape? A—Yes.

Q—And you went down? A—Yes, the Lees invited us to go down and spend a week-end.

Q—Now relative to this letter (the "Toddles" love letter allegedly written by Lee to Mrs. Watson and which Lee has claimed was written as part of a letter-writing contest.) Tell the court how you happened to get it? A—Well, Mrs. Lee told me, "I never had a love letter written to me in all my life. It would be a thrill to get a love letter." I said, "Cal used to write me nice ones." Mrs. Lee said, "Well, let's have a love letter-writing contest. We'll all write letters to each other. You write to Mr. Lee and I'll write to Cal and Mr. Lee will write to you and Cal will write to me and the the best one will get a prize." My husband brought down the letter Mrs. Lee had written to him.

Q—Did your husband and Mrs. Lee read the letter Lee had written to you? A—Yes.

Q—Was Mr. Lee's the best letter? A—Yes, he had written the best letter, so he got the prize. Mrs. Lee and my husband and I chipped in for it.

Q—What was the prize? A—Two cans of beer.

Q—What happened at Orleans when you spent a week-end there? A—Saturday evening we went for a ride. We rode for half an hour. Mrs. Lee suggested we return.

Judge O'Brien again interrupted this time to remark:

"I hope there's something decent in this. I should think that rent somewhere in this. I should think that even the lawyers would be sick of harping on these revolting experiences. I want to tell you gentlemen that I'd like to know what happened, instead of going back to these revolting experiences every time. Well, tell what happened."

IN CAR WITH MRS. LEE

A—(Mrs. Watson) Mrs. Lee and my husband were in my husband's car and they left Mr. Lee and me in his car. I wanted a cigarette. I got out and went over to my husband's car to get a match. As I got to the car, Mrs. Lee sat up. My husband was in the back seat of the car. I said to my husband, "What are you doing in the back of the car?" He told me it was none of my business.

Q—How long had you been living as man and wife up till the time of the raid? A—Until the week before April 6 (1937).

Preceding Mrs. Watson on the witness stand was Mrs. Esther Davis of Salem, friend of all four principals in the double divorce action. She testified that when Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Lee went shopping in Salem on Saturdays they usually dropped in for a call on her.

Mrs. Davis testified concerning a party she gave for her husband January 7, 1937, at which she noticed Mrs. Watson sitting alone and not in spirit with the occasion.

"CAL WAS IN LOVE"

"I went over to her," said Mrs. Davis, "and I said, 'You act as though you're in love with someone.' She said, 'I'm not in love, but Cal is in love with someone. I don't know what's going to happen or what to do.'"

Judge O'Brien: "How many times did you see Mrs. Lee and Watson alone in the car going from your house?"

Mrs. Davis: "About four times between November, 1936, and January, 1937."

Judge O'Brien: "Well, how many times did you see Mrs. Watson and Lee going alone in a car from your house?"

Mrs. Davis: "The same number of times."

Judge O'Brien: "You particularly observed it?"

Mrs. Davis: "Yes."

GUARDS HER HUSBAND

Q—Well, why? Was there anything sinister about it? A—Well, it seemed kind of funny to me.

Q—You've evidently never had much experience in the world? A—I wouldn't let my husband go out alone.

Q—It might be advisable to put a rope on him. You never rode in a car with another man when your husband was not present? A—Not a married man.

Q—Before you were married? A—Yes.

Q—But you remember that on January 7 Mrs. Watson said she was in love with her husband. Do you think she was? A—I don't see how they could be in love with each other and do the things that have been testified to here.

Q—I'm glad you have that appreciation of morality. Does your husband know you are here? A—Certainly.

MRS. EDITH LEE
Death Comes After Her Denial

Man Held After Girl Is Jailed

With 19-year-old Frances F. McCullough, pretty Canadian girl, jailed for contempt because of her repeated refusal to give information to immigration authorities, a Cambridge man was under arrest today in connection with the case.

Charged with harboring an alien, Herbert C. Gates of Larchwood drive, Cambridge, was arrested by federal officials. They declined to discuss his part in the affair.

Frances, graduated from Brighton High School last June, was sent to jail for an indefinite stay by Federal Judge George C. Sweeney when she remained adamant in her refusal to tell circumstances of her re-entry into the United States.

Noyes to Retire As A. P. Chief

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (AP)—Frank B. Noyes of Washington announced today his retirement from the presidency of the Associated Press, at the expiration of his present term in April. He has held the position through 38 eventful years of newspaper history.

To the board of directors, in session here, Mr. Noyes disclosed his decision not to accept re-election under any circumstances. After his long service, he said, he felt entitled to pass his task to younger hands. On July 7, next, he will be 75.

N. Y. Club to Honor Head of Radcliffe

Ada Louise Comstock, president at Radcliffe, today accepted an invitation to be guest of honor at the annual luncheon meeting of the New York Radcliffe Club on Saturday.

The luncheon, to be held at Hotel Biltmore, will be attended by more than 200 Radcliffe alumni. Miss Comstock will speak informally about this year's developments at Radcliffe.

180 Newspapers, Survey Shows, Raised Price

Jump in Production Costs Is Cited in All Sections

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (AP)—In every section of the country advancing production costs have pushed up the prices which millions of readers pay for their daily newspapers.

This was disclosed today in a national survey that showed that while the upward movement was in no sense universal it had been manifested in every area—Southwest, Midwest, East, South and Far West.

In some cases, price increases were announced toward the close of 1937, while in others they were not put into effect into well after the beginning of the new year.

More than 180 newspapers—from California to Rhode Island, from Maine to Florida—were shown to have put up their prices, some in all categories such as home delivery, mail delivery and street sales.

The Far West led all regions in the total number of newspapers advancing their prices—60. The Midwest reported 43, the East 42, the South 28, and the Southwest 14.

As to states, California with 31 reported and Pennsylvania with 25—and others in prospect—were at the top of the list.

Nowhere was the increase sharp—one or two cents a day, with monthly rates being advanced less than proportionately, being widely reported.

An expression fairly typical came from the Washington Star which raised its price from 2 cents to 3 cents per copy.

It was necessary, said the Star, "In order to cover in part the further heavy increase in the price of print paper."

The Hannibal (Missouri) Courier-Post said it was a case of "increasing costs of everything" that goes into the publication of a paper.

Fourth of Morning Musicales Attracts Fashionables

By BETTY ALDEN

THE ANNUAL EXODUS of socialites to the winter resorts in Bermuda and the South doesn't seem to make any difference in the size of the audience at the ever popular Boston Morning Musicales . . . which are held at the Hotel Statler for the benefit of the Boston School of Occupational Therapy . . .

A seemingly endless stream of fashionably dressed music lovers came up the grand stairway of the ballroom foyer yesterday morning to enjoy a cup of coffee and a little conversation with friends before finding their seats in the ballroom for the fourth concert in this season's series . . .

BETTY WATSON

The artist yesterday morning was Artur Rubinstein, noted pianist . . .

Mrs. John W. Myers, who has been the capable chairman of the musicales ever since they were originated ten years ago, strolled about with a cup of coffee in one hand and chatted with many subscribers . . .

She extended the warmest greetings and congratulations to Mrs. Edwin F. Cave, who has just been appointed a member of the musicales committee . . .

In the group standing near the coffee tables, chatting about everything from the weather to the annual drive for advertisements for the spring show program which the Vincent Club is conducting, were Mrs. William B. Long, dressed in a soft shade of green rabbits wool and a twisted red and green turban, and Mrs. Alexander Wheeler, who is her seat-mate at all the concerts . . .

Mrs. Frank Stewart helped to serve the coffee and at the same time look out for her guest, Mrs. William Devons Potter of Greenfield . . .

* * *

Discuss Vincent Club's Advertising Campaign

MRS. WILLIAM C. COX, former president of the Vincent Club, talked over the advertising campaign with Louise McMillen, who is one of the team captains in this important undertaking . . .

Through an unfortunate circumstance, Miss McMillen missed out on a trip around the world this winter . . . but she has certainly missed nothing in the way of good looking costumes . . .

For the past year or two she had a job in New York and has brought back to Boston much of the sophistication of Park avenue . . .

Her wardrobe must contain innumerable modish street outfits for each time we see her she is wearing something different . . . Yesterday morning, she was turned out in a nice black wool dress, a square shouldered mink cape and an unusual hat of black and scarlet feathers . . .

Mrs. Robert C. Terry managed her job of tending the ballroom doors as efficiently as ever and looked very springlike in a pale blue wool dress with a bright colored Paisley turban . . .

Miss Louise Coburn, Mrs. Winthrop Jameson and Miss Elizabeth Leland were also busily engaged in their various duties as committee members . . .

Pianist Rubinstein couldn't have chosen a more appropriate program for Joan Thomson, debutante daughter of Mrs. Robert Farrington of Newton, who was acting as an usher . . .

Joan missed the first three concerts in this year's series because she is a student at Bennington College . . . way up in the southwestern part of Vermont . . .

But Bennington has an unusual schedule which gives the girls a two-months' vacation in the middle of the winter . . . so they may attend concerts and take trips for practical experience to supplement their studies . . .

* * *

Post Debutantes Aid With Ushering

MR. RUBINSTEINS'S choice of selections started with Schumann, Chopin and other classic composers, and included several of the famous moderns such as Ravel, Debussy and DeFalla . . . thus presenting what might be described as a well rounded hour and a half course in pianoforte interpretation . . .

Assisting Joan Thomson with ushering duties on the center aisle was Betty Watson, who is also a music student and an attentive listener . . . Some of the Junior League girls who usually usher had to devote the morning to field trips in connection with their provisional training course . . . so a number of post debutantes were invited to substitute . . . these included Sue Carl, Janet McNeil, Betty Albers, Marion Minot, Phyllis Howe and Rosalind Rogers . . .

Mrs. Charles Fanning Ayer treated the audience to a glimpse of the new "shocking" pink in her flaring felt hat . . . and Mrs. Harry Haywood had touches of pink grosgrain ribbon in her black dress . . . Mrs. William H. Blood, Jr., served as information "clerk" or words to that effect . . . as she sat at a table answering questions about the various programs and so forth . . .

Mrs. Carl E. Gilbert, Mrs. Robert Stephenson, Mrs. Francis Hastings, Marjorie Motley, Mrs. Harvey Hilton, Mrs. Joseph Coletti and Mrs. Robert Treat Paine are just a few of the many others we noted in the throng of music lovers . . .

* * *

Society Folk Plan Winter Trips

"THAT LITTLE BIRD" who tells us bits of news was also flitting about at the musicale . . . He heard that Mr. and Mrs. James Amory Sullivan will bask in the warmth and sunshine of Mexico this winter . . . instead of southern Italy and the Riviera where they spent such a long, enjoyable vacation a year ago . . .

. . . That Mrs. John T. Whicher of Longwood Towers is planning an extended motor trip through the southern states, touching cities on the Gulf of Mexico, and eventually winding up in California . . . Her post deb daughter, Anne, will accompany her and they are setting out the first of next week . . .

. . . That Mrs. Charles S. Jenney may miss the next musicale on February 16, for she and Mr. Jenney are taking a trip to the Middle West . . .

. . . That Mary Hastings has been invited to visit several of the California girls with whom she went abroad last summer . . . but Mary has become a skiing enthusiast and is still a bit undecided whether to choose New Hampshire's snowy slopes or the warm sunny clime of California for her winter recreation . . .

. . . That Janet Murchie has postponed her wedding plans indefinitely . . .

. . . That Peggy Seyburn hardly had time to lose her golden summer tan, acquired at Magnolia, before dashing off to Palm Beach where she is a leading member of the sophisticated younger set . . .

. . . That young hostesses are already planning their parties for the next Junior Dinner Dance . . . One has to start dating up the popular girls and men about town early . . .

Debutante Is Busy

THE FACT that the party season for the debutantes is practically over, doesn't mean that Josefa Richmond can't find enough to keep her busy. She is one of the debutante ushers at the Morning Musicales and spends a couple of days a week at her Junior League provisional training course. In between times she is one of the many debutantes soliciting advertisements for the Vincent Club show program. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph S. Richmond of Milton.

Tea Will Open Art Exhibit

Miss Emily Wainwright Browne will be in charge of the tea served at the private view of portraits and drawings by her sister, Miss Margaret Fitzhugh Browne, at the Doll and Richards gallery on Newbury street, next Monday afternoon.

The pourers will include Mrs. William Penn Cresson, Helen Gilbert, Mrs. Christian A. Herter, Mrs. Charles D. Hodges, Katherine W. Lane, Mrs. V. Strekolovsky, Mrs. William C. Thomas, Mrs. Howard Wing and Miss Beatrice Hereford, the monologuist, whose portrait will be among those in the exhibit.

Kennedy-Quartz Ceremony

Marjorie Nyahan and Margaret Logue of West Roxbury shared hostess honors at the buffet supper in honor of Alice Quartz of Newton, who becomes Mrs. Edmund Kennedy at a quiet ceremony next Monday morning, in Our Lady of the Presentation Church in Brighton.

Reception will follow at the Myles Standish Hotel, after which the bridal couple will leave on a Southern trip.

Alice's sister, Mary, will be her only attendant while the bridegroom's brother, Frank, will serve as best man. Ushers include James McGovern of Brighton, James Denning of Chelsea and John Handrahan of Brighton.

Alice, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Quartz of Newton, was graduated from Boston Academy of Notre Dame and Emmanuel College. This year she's been studying at the Boston College School of Social Service.

Mr. Kennedy was graduated from Boston College and the Harvard School of Business Administration.

Three Gay Junior Philomatheia Events

Valentine Dance, Feb. 11, First on Calendar

Not content with concentrating on one dance, Junior Philomatheians are making plans for no less than three soirees, two of which are scheduled to take place before Lent's arrival.

The first, a Valentine dance, is slated for February 11 at the clubhouse where Helen Bulher and her aides are planning a diverting evening for members of the club and their escorts.

On March 1, a festive feeling will overtake the club when girls gather for their bit of Mardi-Gras celebration. Costumes, masks and indirect lighting will be by-words of the evening. The gala event of the year, the annual post-Easter supper dance scheduled for Friday, April 22, will be directed by Agnes McHugh of Everett, one of the group's most active members.

Tickets for the St. Valentine's frolic are in charge of Miriam Donald. Virginia Fouhy of Belmont is selecting the music and Frankie Doyle of Dorchester is planning the refreshment menu.

Miniature cupids and lacy tokens of all sort will be used in decorating the clubhouse under the direction of Rose Gunning and her aides. Lois McCarthy is choosing the usher staff. Catherine Curley is keeping newspapers in touch with the committee plans while Elizabeth Chisholm chairmans the usher committee.

Art Devotees View Exhibit At Museum

Mrs. David Sigourney and Mrs. Marc Peter were two of the hostesses greeting guests yesterday afternoon at the new exhibit of paintings and drawings which opened at the Boston Museum of Modern Art, 270 Dartmouth street.

The exhibition, which includes paintings and drawings by the great designers of ballet scenery, stage settings and costumes, is the first of its kind ever to be shown in Boston.

Tea was served in the museum's new dining room and cocktail lounge, which is a delightful innovation at the club this year, and gives members an opportunity to sit down and enjoy their refreshments while they discuss the merits of this or that painting.

Among the art lovers who visited the galleries during tea time were Polly Binney of Milton, Mrs. Dunbar Lockwood, Mrs. William Penn Cresson, Nathaniel Saltonstall, Edward Jackson Holmes, president of the Museum of Fine Arts, and Mrs. Holmes, Mrs. Daniel de Menocal and Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Whittier.

Mrs. Channing Frothingham had a bit of refreshment in a threesome with her daughter-in-law, Rose Whitman Frothingham, and Evelyn Hollingsworth. Mrs. Elizabeth Beale Hinds discussed the paintings over a cocktail with several friends, and Thomas Metcalf, vice-president of the museum, stopped for a friendly chat with them from time to time.

Others present included Mrs. Benjamin P. Moseley, Ellen Moseley, Catherine Lane, William Reed, Eleanor Van Kleeck with her mother, Mrs. Walter Van Kleeck, Jean Halladay, Mrs. William B. Pratt, Ellanor Petri, Mr. Wallace Goodrich, head of the New England Conservatory of Music, and Mrs. Goodrich, and Miss Charlotte Allen.

Plan Charity Dance at Tech

MARGUERITE DI VENUTI MARY KENNEALLY

KAY O'NEILL VIRGINIA FLYNN CAROLYN CAPITELL

THIS ENERGETIC group of college students is taking some time off from their books to arrange the charity dance of the Federation of College Catholic Clubs, Friday evening, at the Walker Memorial of M. I. T. In the front row are Kay O'Neill, Virginia Flynn and Carolyn Capitell, while Marguerite Di Venuti and Mary Kenneally peer over their shoulders from the rear. A bundle of old clothes will be the admission to the party, which is arousing much interest in the gay collegiate group.

Senior Philomatheia Ball Tomorrow Night

With the Senior Philomatheia ball scheduled for Friday evening, the regular meeting of the club, always held on the second Friday of the month, has been postponed to the following Friday, January 21.

Rev. John Lyons, formerly rector of Shadowbrook and now rector of the Jesuit retreat house in Andover, will be guest speaker. A short talk on the passing of one of the greatest Catholic laymen, Joseph L. Pah Hong of China will be given by Mrs. Vincent P. Roberts, president of the club, and friend of the wealthy Chinese.

Among them are Mr. and Mrs. Vincent P. Roberts, Mrs. B. J. A'Hearn, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Bannan, Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Bragie, Dr. and Mrs. Daniel Buckley, Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly, Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Donovan, Dr. and Mrs. John G. Downing, Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Duffy, Marcella Eberle and Mrs. Mary O'Leary Finucane.

Also sponsoring the affair are Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Fitzgerald, Dr. and Mrs. John A. Foley, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Fouhy, Mr. and Mrs. G. Frank Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. McCarthy, Dr. and Mrs. Edward O'Brien, Mrs. John J. Williams and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Winship.

G. O. P. Women To Entertain

Merwin K. Hart, president of the New York State Economic Council and chairman of the committee for American Private Enterprise, will be the guest of honor at a luncheon at the Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts on Saturday. Following the luncheon Mr. Hart will speak on "This American System."

Among the guests at the luncheon will be Mrs. Henry D. Tudor, Mrs. James Cunningham Gray, Mrs. Stanwood G. Wellington, Mrs. Wilbur S. Grant, Mrs. Robert Cushman, Mrs. Edwin D. Tirrell, Mrs. Parshall Fanning, Mrs. Walter C. Baylies, Mrs. Elizabeth Flint, Mrs. George W. Perkins, Rachel Morse, Katherine V. Parker and Mrs. Henry Parkman, Jr.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 — President Roosevelt has signed a bill prohibiting the making of photographs, sketches or maps of vital military and naval defenses.

Religious Union Meets Tonight

Practical plans for preserving peace, a problem which concerns everyone today, will be discussed by the Rev. Palfrey Perkins, D. D., of King's Chapel this evening. Dr. Perkins will speak at an open meeting sponsored by the new commonwealth committee of the Young People's Religious Union in the parish house of the First Parish Church in Cambridge.

Following Dr. Perkins' lecture there will be a period of discussion led by Miss Sarah Wambaugh of Cambridge, who was recently technical advisor to the League of Nations and deputy member of the Saar Plebescite Committee. Miss Wambaugh is a member of the newly formed Massachusetts committee of the New Commonwealth Society.

Other committee members are Frances Williams of Marlborough street, Mrs. Robert C. Dexter of Belmont, Professor A. Eugene Staley of Somerville, the Rev. Joseph Barth of Newton, W. S. Howe of Somerville and Reynolds D. Brown of Milton.

Mrs. Frederic P. Kimball of Dedham, Miss Erica Beck of Cambridge and Hallowell Vaughan of Belmont form the New Commonwealth Committee of the Young Peoples Religious Union which is sponsoring this evening's discussion. The meeting is open to the public.

WHAT HAPPENED TO 50 MILLION PEOPLE

Reliable sources state that last year 50 millions of people suffered from colds and lost 500 millions of dollars due to absence from work, and other attending expenses.

Did the cost stop there? Possibly not in all cases. Every cold is dangerous, and none should be neglected.

At the very first sign of a cold—at the first sneeze or nasal congestion—start taking Father John's Medicine regularly. Its 83 years of use, is convincing proof of its value. It must be good.

Auer Not Seeking Academy Awards

Since the recent awarding of 1937's "bests" to the film gentry, there has been considerable agitation among the fans over failure of the country's critics to properly recognize the highly gifted contributors to fun on the screen.

If anybody in the complaint department had Mischa Auer in mind, they are hereby advised to include him out of such calculations.

"Me," says Mischa, of the melancholy mien, "I'm infatuated with nonsense.

"Just the other day, Bill Powell and I were agreeing that the solemn people and the epic productions can have their awards for all of us. We get the laughs and a longer life in pictures. And, after all, they can only hock the award for fifty cents at most."

HONORED AT PARTY

The Auer philosophizing took place last night at a press party given him by Charles W. Koerner, New England division manager for the Keith theaters. At noon today, the lean and hungry-looking Russian aristocrat, whose speciality is draping himself over a chandelier a la gorilla, will open a week's engagement on the Keith-Memorial stage.

He calls his act "My Hollywood Party," and to see it this week will be equivalent to having keyhole-peeping privileges to the West Coast's most exciting film parties. For Mischa will do all the cockeyed stunts he's been doing since he was a student at New York's Ethical Culture School.

STARTED AT PARTY

Mischa never thought they were particularly funny, doesn't think so now. (It was his ambition to be a "heavy" in Hollywood) but Director Gregory La Cava once laughed until he cried at his goings-on at a swank Hollywood party. And Auer's amazing career stemmed from that particular occasion.

La Cava decided he must repeat his antics in "My Man Godfrey." You know the rest—that the producers have been keeping Mischa so busy that there has been absolutely no rest for him since then.

And, despite the overwhelming fan vote in his favor, Mischa Auer insists:

"It's really not funny—that apeman stunt I do. Anybody could do it. YOU could do it. (Now, really, Mister Auer!) It's the situation in 'My Man Godfrey' that was so funny and the fact that people have suddenly become conscious of the next step to the booby-hatch, the sense of the ridiculous, that combined to put over my particular stunt."

What Mischa Auer leaves out in his summation of his particular contribution to the screen is the fact that it is in a class with that of Charlie Chaplin. While each is original, both have that same tragic look in their eyes that makes them most appealing and defenseless when they are being their funniest.

UNHAPPY CHILDHOOD

Like Chaplin, Auer has had an unhappy childhood. Orphaned at an early age, he was one of a band of homeless boys who subsisted by begging or stealing as they wandered through Europe in 1918. It was that experience that really started him on his acting career. After his famous grandfather, Leopold Auer, learned of his plight and sent him funds to come to America, he was enrolled in the Ethical Culture School of New York and demanded to play Francois Villon in the school production, "If I Were King."

"I felt that I had earned the right to play the part, for no other boy in the school could know as I did what it felt like to be a thief and a vagabond."

Clear Walt Disney In Plagiarism Case

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 13—Walt Disney, Mickey Mouse, creator, was cleared of a plagiarism charge by Superior Court Judge Thomas Gould who refused to allow damages in a suit brought by John P. Wade.

Wade claimed he submitted a story to the cartoonist from which "Mickey's polo club" was adapted. Disney claimed the scenario plot developed from his own attempts to play polo.

West's Film Epic At Paramount And Fenway

'Wells Fargo' Thrills All With Transport Cavalcade

The Paramount and Fenway screens offer a major attraction this week in "Wells Fargo," Paramount's heroic story of the opening up of the old West by means of the pony express.

Hollywood's ace director, Frank Loyd, who gave us "Cavalcade" and "Mutiny on the Bounty," is responsible for this American cavalcade of transportation and communication that goes back to the days of the broad-visioned Wells and Fargo, who are to be credited for blazing new trails, discovering new frontiers in the old West.

• • •

The picture captures all the lusty adventurousness and magnificent courage of the men and women who made the period from 1841 to 1870 probably the most colorful in America's gloriously gaudy history.

It is a stirring, majestic background for the tender romance that threads its brave way through "Wells Fargo."

Joel McCrea and Frances Dee portray the lovers in this epic drama. He is the advance man and highly trusted messenger for Harry Henry Wells. It is his duty to carry the mail by stages from Batavia, N. Y., to San Francisco, Calif. Miss Dee, his real-life wife, portrays the wife who fails to understand the dream he and those other bygone trail-breakers have made reality for you and you.

Their varied viewpoints and the Civil War combine to separate these two until their daughter's seventeenth birthday reunites them.

• • •

A brilliant performance is turned in by Bob Burns, the bazooka man, who plays his first straight role in this one. Other excellent performances are given by Lloyd Nolan, Porter Hall, Frank Morgan, Mary Nash, Henry O'Neill and Jack Clark.

New Memorial, Boston Bills

Miriam Hopkins and Ray Milland are co-starred in RKO Radio's romantic drama, "Wise Girl," the feature picture on the Keith-Memorial screen for the week starting today. Mischa Auer, celebrated screen comedian, is the star of the stage show.

Miss Hopkins is cast as a rich debutante in "Wise Girl." Her father is striving to gain custody of two orphaned granddaughters living with their uncle and guardian, Ray Milland, improvident young artist. To aid her father's plan, Miss Hopkins poses as a struggling stage-struck girl, moves to Greenwich Village, becomes acquainted with the artist and, contrary to her plans, falls in love with him. There are exciting developments, aided by such popular performers as Walter Abel, Henry Stephenson, Alec Craig and others.

Mischa Auer, the fans' favorite screen comedian, will present a symposium of his hit comedy roles on the Keith-Memorial stage this week. Among these will be his hilarious role of the piano player who impersonated an ape in "My Man Godfrey," the silent Indian of "The Gay Desperado," the bogus count of "Vogues of 1938," and the swami in "Merry-Go-Round of 1938."

• • •

"You're a Sweetheart," the Universal musical starring Alice Faye, moved over to the RKO-Boston today for the week from the Keith-Memorial where it enjoyed a most successful run. The companion picture is "The Jury's Secret," featuring Kent Taylor, Fay Wray and Jane Darwell.

Briefly, the plot of "You're a Sweetheart" concerns a Broadway production starring Miss Faye which runs an entire week with a one-man audience and makes a profit. The man is George Murphy and the producer is Ken Murray. The latter's stooge, Oswald, Charles Winninger, Andy Devine and William Gargan are in the supporting cast.

Plan Free Medical Service for Poor

CHICAGO, Jan. 13 (INS)—Plans to provide adequate free medical service for the poor throughout the United States were announced by the American Medical Association.

An editorial in the Journal of the Ama said that "an attempt will be made to apply on a nation-wide scale the best features of the plans already in effect, utilizing in each county the fullest extent of the services there available."

'Tovarich' on Met Screen

Warner Brothers' opulent production, "Tovarich," which has been adapted from the spectacularly successful stage hit opens today at the Metropolitan, following an enthusiastic reception in New York.

Orchidaceous Claudette Colbert and the distinguished continental actor, Charles Boyer, play the roles of the grand duchess and the prince exiled from their native Russia by the revolution.

The stage show this week is headed by Patricia Bowman, who comes here after a long run at New York's famous Radio City Music Hall. Star of such Broadway successes as "Ziegfield Follies" and "Calling All Stars," she is considered America's top ballerino.

Others in the "Rhythm On Parade" cast are Tip, Tap, Toe, dancing stars of "You Can't Have Everything;" Nina Allen and her Silver ones, nine queens of harmony presenting a "Rhapsody of Rhythm" with the Eight Virginians, singing ensemble; Sylvia Clark, radio comedienne; the Four Ortons, Frankson, European magician, and the Swing O-Pators, in a new series of precision numbers.

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

JOTTINGS: Senator Theodore R. Plunkett (R.) of Adams will try in the next election to be the second of his line to hold the lieutenant-governorship . . . His grandfather, William C. Plunkett was the first . . . In a preponderantly Democratic district, Senator Plunkett has been elected four times . . . The announcement is due within a week . . .

The Hub Theater will change hands again within a fortnight. The new owners will be the Trans-Lux Company, and the theater will be a newsreel house . . . This column spoke too quickly in commenting Tuesday about a totality of darkness in the legitimate theaters next week. An overnight booking finds a play "If I Were You," starring Constance Cummings, booked into the Wilbur for next Monday . . . Miss Cummings' husband, Benn W. Levy, is one of the collaborators, and Paul Hervey Fox is the other . . . Passes are taboo at two theaters, the Shubert-Copley and the Wilbur . . . Martin Broones, producer of "Leaning on Letty," and husband of the star, Charlotte Greenwood, paid cash-money for a party of eight the other night.

* * *

Plenty of passers-by saw Lieut. Gov. Kelly and Atty. Gen. Dever in a lengthy huddle in a State House corridor yester-afternoon . . . Injection of the New Deal issue into the governor-situation has evoked much talk . . . If it won't be Dever in the vote-tourney in opposition to Governor Hurley, it may be Kelly . . . Friends of the latter young man feel that they can't count out a politician who got 10,000 more votes that the party's chief standard-bearer, and who defeated Leverett Saltonstall, who is a certainty as a Republican candidate.

* * *

Ella Logan, the pint-sized singer who closed a Metropolitan run last night, has adopted two children and says she will adopt three more. And Ella's single . . . This attractive little lady got to the top "the hard way" . . . Her penury for several seasons of trying to crash the Broadway time placed her practically on a diet of nickel orangeades . . . It had so much effect, this diet, that Miss Logan today cannot abide the sight or taste of fruit-juices.

At the party welcoming Mischa Auer to the Keith Memorial last night, the girls of the press were presented camelias and gardenias by Miss Logan . . . Auer was a quick hit with the scribes . . . This is his first "personal appearance" . . . He has been in Hollywood for 10 years . . . He professes to be amazed (and sounds convincing) at the fact that a wide and widening public laughs at his antics . . . "I'm a character actor who plays funny guys," Auer says.

* * *

SOMETHING TO GURGLE ABOUT:

This might make a little feature story with pictures . . . In June past, the old grads got together at Ithaca, and the Cornell class of 1912 voted to give a four-year paid-up scholarship to the first grandson of the class . . . Four days later, a son was born to Jay Fasset, 3d, assistant manager of the Bellevue Hotel . . . As his papa, the young-looking actor, Jay Fassett, (who played here in "Tovarich"), was one of the class of '12, the new arrival became the winner . . . The baby is seven months old now, and official notification of the donation of the scholarship was read to him in his crib at the Fassetts' Needham home yesterday.

* * *

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY:

Ned Alvord, the famous press-agent, is in town as advance man for the version of "Julius Caesar," opening at the Colonial Theater a week from Monday . . . Alvord has two costumes for making the rounds of the dram-editors' desks. Formal day wear is one of them . . . When Alvord is representing a show which gets more than $1.65 as the top price of tickets he wears the tails . . . Another press-agent in town is Rob Reud, the crack public relations counsel, who was with Gilbert Miller for many seasons. Reud is on the staff of Jed Harris, which indicates that Harris is setting up shop permanently again along the Rialto.

James Wheeler Fox is the name of the month old scion of the House of Maxwell Fox . . . The child's daddy is Variety's alert correspondent in this region, and Mrs. Fox corresponds for Editor and Publisher . . . Jack Goodwin's appointment as successor of the lamented Henry Taylor in the management of the Metropolitan is winning cheers. Goodwin is an able showman and highly popular . . . Duncan McCallum of Boston is half of the Ohio badminton championship. He and a partner from Cleveland won the recent doubles tourney at Dayton . . . Ed Ronsebaum leaves today for Philadelphia to assume charge of the territory for Columbia pictures . . .

A young English actor named Bernard Lee has been imported to play opposite Constance Cummings in "If I Were You."

Eddy Will Star With Rainer

Rumor Nelson Won't Warble a Note In New Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor International News Service

Copyright, 1938, by International News Service

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 13—The most daring bit of casting in many a moon is the combination of Luise Rainer and Nelson Eddy in a story being whipped into shape right now for them on the M-G-M lot.

Louella O. Parsons

For some time studio officials have made no secret of their worries in obtaining the right story for Luise—and it is particularly important now since she has been off the screen so long.

While great secrecy surrounds the actual story I hear that La Rainer will be seen as a Princess of India, with Nelson in uniform as an English officer who falls in love with her. But even more startling than anything else is the rumor that Eddy won't warble a note—marking his very first time on the screen without singing! Add to daring experiments M-G-M's brain wave in forgetting Eddy's voice and teaming him as an actor with last year's academy winner.

The fate of future Hollywood production in England hangs on two pictures and will be determined within the next few weeks when these films are previewed for the press. They are "A Yank at Oxford," the Robert Taylor opus which M-G-M made abroad and which will be ready for its final preview in a few days, and "He Was Her Man," the 20th Century-Fox musical drama starring Gracie Fields and Victor McLaglen. The latter is in process of being cut and scored and should be ready soon.

Technical difficulties abroad are such that unless the pictures are excellent I doubt if American producers will continue to make pictures in England.

* * *

The excitement of the Perry-Vines tennis match surpassed anything in Hollywood—even horse racing. When a photographer's flash bulb went off at the wrong time and Fred Perry missed a play, the spectators were in an uproar and yelled "put him out." The newspaper photographers and magazine boys were all in a corner watching the game, but at the threatened riot they started investigating and found that the culprit was the tennis club's own publicity man.

* * *

Ursula Parrott, who writes so expertly on affairs of the heart in spite of having three divorces to her credit, among them her recent legal parting from John Wildberg, has sold M-G-M her latest story, "Infidelity," soon to be published in Cosmopolitan. It tells of a married couple whose renewed acquaintances with schoolday sweethearts endangers their happiness. A little too early to cast, but I understand Rosalind Russell and Franchot Tone will probably head the roster.

* * *

Snapshots of Hollywood

WILLIE WYLER isn't making any secret of his admiration for OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND; the JOAN FONTAINE-CONRAD NAGEL romance, first printed here, is now out in the open; RUDY VALLEE so absorbed in GLORIA YOUNGBLOOD at the PERRY-VINES tennis match that he lost a treasured scarf and had the ushers looking madly for it; KATHARINE HEPBURN has trained East, but not HOWARD HUGHES. He or his double was supping with PAULETTE GODDARD at a night spot following the tennis matches.

"HOLLYWOOD HOTEL," with Louella Parsons, Benny Goodman and his orchestra, Dick Powell and Frances Langford opens Thursday January 20, on the screen of the Metropolitan Theater.

Dance Program In Y. W. C. A. Hall

Hanya Holm, whose credo is "everyone can dance," will appear in a dance recital under the auspices of the health education department, Boston Y. W. C. A., tomorrow at 8:15 p. m. in Lee Auditorium, 140 Clarendon street.

Miss Holm will also act as commentator explaining the dance movements which her seven young dancers will illustrate in the demonstration program. After solo studies by the students the program will conclude with a group study in falls.

'Lost Horizon' At the Strand

"Lost Horizon," with Ronald Colman, one of the past year's finest film achievements, and "Roaring Timber," starring Jack Holt, will be the screen attractions at the Strand Theater tomorrow, Friday and Saturday.

Scrambled Seems to Be the Order

Unless the ice bag on Carole Lombard's head gives instant relief she probably will be little interested in how her eggs are cooked, but at the moment Fredric March apparently has a scrambled order. This all happens in "Nothing Sacred," which comes to Loew's State and Orpheum tomorrow.

Charlotte In Promise

Charlotte Greenwood will definitely end her Boston engagement in "Leaning on Letty" at the Wilbur Theater on Saturday night. However, she promises in reciprocation for this city's enthusiastic reception of her current comedy hit, to hold the premiere of her new play here before it is exhibited in New York or London.

Miss Greenwood's "Leaning on Letty" has had an exceptional success since its Pacific Coast try-out. It ran for 20 weeks in Chicago, a month in Philadelphia and has continued its success in Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburgh, Detroit, St. Louis, through Eastern Canada and finally here in Boston.

Waring Draws Record Crowd

Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians, those unfailing record-breakers, are at it again. Their initial week at New York's Paramount Theater, where they are fulfilling a four-week engagement, grossed a total that topped the house receipts record by many thousands. The unit also scored a new high for performance, playing seven shows the final day of the year.

The second week's attendance and receipts set a new high for attractions playing two consecutive weeks at the house and with two more weeks to run the Waring group are expected to establish attendance and receipts highs that will stand for many seasons.

Film Great All in One Picture

On the program opening with "Nothing Sacred," at both Loew's State and Orpheum Theaters tomorrow, is "Jimmy Fidler's Personality Parade." The "Personality Parade" has a cast of 72 actors, and is described as the most complete record of Hollywood's screen idols, past aand present, ever assembled.

Included in the parade are Charles Chaplin, Wallace Beery, Harold Lloyd, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Ronald Colman, Lewis Stone, Anita Stewart, Colleen Moore, Leatrice Joy, Charles Murray and George Sidney, Anna Q. Nilson, Ben Turpin, Phyllis Haver, May McAvoy, Alla Nazimova, Hobart Bosworth, Helen Chadwick, Louise Fazenda and Irene Rich.

MUSIC HAS CHARMS TO SOOTHE BIG GUS

"YOU WOULDN'T DARE!"
But Sheila could feel her face going white at threat of Big Gus Mornick to visit vengeance on her family should she betray secret. With Brad arrested and Mickey mysteriously absent, who could she call upon for aid against this overlord of the underworld?

SENTIMENT WINS. Mornick beats time to crooner's song as Sheila realizes the radio singer is her missing brother-in-law. Music takes Mornick's attention from Sheila for the moment, however.

all familiar to her, even to the sliding door and the stuffed fish over the fireplace. It was puzzling.

"Hey, Shorty," called Big Gus. "Stand up."

From a chair near the fire there rose a stunted figure with broad shoulders and a large, intelligent head. Sheila understood why she had not seen him at first. His legs were no longer than the rest of his body.

"That's who [illegible]" said

"Thanks [illegible]," said Sheila, drawing [illegible] here I'll [illegible]."

"I guess [illegible]," answered Big Gus. He sat down. "[illegible] doors locked, and I [illegible] I find out how you got [illegible]. I got a kind of a [illegible] up on gate-crashers [illegible] I wish they was a [illegible]."

"But you're [illegible]—began Sheila, furious [illegible] herself. Here in the center of his illegal kingdom Big Gus [illegible] formidable [illegible]. And after all he hadn't asked her to the [illegible]. "Well, if you want to know so badly, there's no secret about how I got here. I saw you coming out of the [illegible] and I chased you. I thought I saw Mickey, too. And now I'm going."

"Sounds okay," said Big Gus, "but I got to be careful. A lot of guys would like to know where this joint is. Say, girlie, you ought to be tickled."

He rose and walked over to her. "Ain't every frail gets in here. I tell you what . . . you set down and take it easy while I check up on your story . . . maybe I can get a line on your brother, too. Hey, [illegible] about a little music? [illegible] sweet and low."

The whole thing was incredible, Sheila [illegible] was plain Big Gus was in [illegible]. Obviously, it wasn't [illegible] force an issue . . . And she was [illegible] curious as to why this particular spot—this trophy room buried in a downtown building—should be so tantalizingly familiar.

In response to Mornick's instructions, music [illegible] from an unseen radio, a current [illegible] played with lingering and slightly drippy sweetness.

Read This First --- Then Go On With the Story

GAY, young, beautiful — that's Sheila Kelly when this story opens. Heart-free, too, except for Attorney Jerry O'Donovan, former B. C. football star, whom she vaguely thinks of as her future husband. But Sheila's glad to have a temporary job at the State House, so she can contribute to the support of her family—Barney, her father, injured in the police strike; Patsy, her pleasure loving 16 year-old sister; and her mother. She shares her father's ambitions, too, for her brother, Mickey. But Mickey would rather be a pugilist than a lawyer.

In protecting Patsy from the consequences of a "pickup date," Sheila meets Bradford Cabot Talton, Harvard student and scion of an old and wealthy Beacon street family. Brad seeks to make an easy conquest. But Sheila turns him down cold. Not, however, before Jerry has seen them together.

Though she doesn't know it, Sheila has also attracted the interest of Big Gus Mornick, boss of the Boston rackets, who wants a secret report on racketeering she has transcribed. He assigns one of his torpedos, Greefy Koopman, to shadow her, but Greefy's methods are crude, and he only gets a beating-up from Jerry.

Meanwhile, the Kelly home acquires two non-paying guests—Delphine Barton, Sheila's older sister, and Delphine's small son, Timmy. Del has parted from her husband Vincent Barton, of Jamaica Plain. Vince can croon like Bing Crosby, but has a weak spot for blondes and bookies.

The home situation doesn't improve any when Mickey insists on pursuing a pugilistic career in the face of his father's orders. Learning that Mickey intends to appear at the Boston Arena, and that her father knows it, Sheila goes there with Patsy to warn him.

They can't find Mickey, because he is fighting under an alias, but they meet Brad and his sister, Mrs. Trudy Wendell of Dover, his Harvard roommate, Whit Prentiss, and Jane Prentiss, Whit's cousin, society debutante, who thinks she owns Brad, even if he has his doubts.

Charmed by Sheila, Mrs. Wendell asks her and Patsy to join them in ringside seats. Mickey finally appears, too late for Sheila to do anything about it, and knocks out Young Maggio—much to the disgust of Big Gus Mornick who is also sitting ringside.

Gus, who masquerades as a "sportsman," tries to sign Mickey up to a fight contract, but is balked by Sheila. Later, Sheila, Patsy and Mickey accompany Brad's party to the Towne club, where Brad asks Sheila to the Harvard-Dartmouth game. This conflicts with a date with Jerry for the Boston College-Detroit game, but, when Jerry fails to appear on game day, Sheila goes with Brad. After dinner downtown, they wind up at Trudy's Dover mansion, where Brad wins Sheila's sympathy by an earnest profession of love. Angry at Jerry, she lets Brad kiss her, and is surprised to find herself swept away by a gust of emotion.

Brad starts to the club with Sheila, but is arrested for speeding, and Sheila continues alone by taxi. Mornick's car is leaving the club, and Sheila follows it to the racketeer's South End headquarters. Thinking Mickey is inside, she enters only to discover she has left herself open to Big Gus's advances.

Now Follow Sheila Kelly Through This Thrilling Serial

"I got two weak spots [illegible]," he said, his voice [illegible] almost deprecatory. "Nice sweet music and nice sweet frails like you." He waved the air with a large hand, keeping time with the music. "It's beautiful, ain't it? That's [illegible] sit down. [illegible] Anything but [illegible]."

"There's a new crooner on KFI," said Sheila. "[illegible] minutes."

"[illegible]" said Big Gus. "[illegible] I can get [illegible] Yes [illegible] Big Gus Mornick [illegible]

[illegible] like [illegible] a maze of steel doors and mysteries. She could imagine secrets within secrets still, both in owner and building.

One of them was speedily revealed. As the music [illegible] with a concealed [illegible] Big Gus turned to a desk, [illegible] back a slide and began [illegible]. A faint click came to Sheila's ears. She saw Mornick was writing on a [illegible].

[illegible] a stare. It was a [illegible]. She knew whatever Big Gus was writing—probably orders to some henchman to check on her story—would appear at the other end of a wire as he wrote.

Then something clicked in her mind too, and she realized why this place was strangely familiar. It had been exactly described in a report she had transcribed at the State House for Chief of Detectives John Stokes—a mysterious report full of cryptic symbols, seemingly jumbled letters, numbers and punctuating signs. Even to the teletype.

She searched her memory and recalled that it had appeared in the report after the entry "Z-11 HDQ 1." There'd been other entries about Z-11 too, so many she couldn't recall all of them. One had been in reference to a man named Gaeta. Another mentioned one Beano Breen. Others had to do with large amounts paid various persons who were designated only by initials. She imagined they were traps.

* * *

NOW she was sure of it. Be[illegible] knew that Z-11 was Big Gus Mornick and that HDQ 1 was the room in which she sat.

She realized, too, for the first time, that it was a report on Boston racketeering she'd transcribed. It had arrived mysteriously in her office, and had been distributed among various typists, so that none handled it in full. Thus making it impossible for any of them to know what it was all about. But Sheila knew she had found the missing key.

She wondered how important it might be to Jerry O'Donovan. Jerry and his "youth wing" had made the rackets an issue in the closing days of the campaign.

Anyway, as long as she was compelled to stay, she'd keep her eyes and ears open.

The program was coming in from the Coast station. It was a fast-gaited dance music.

"'Guess the crooner ain't on yet," said Big Gus. "I don't go for that hotcha stuff much. I like music soft and low—kind of old style. I guess I'm what you'd call a sucker for sentiment. Nice sentiment, you understand." The doughy look came on again. "Now you take this room here, girlie. You can tell from lookin' at it I'm a fella that's nuts about the great outdoors. But what chance have I got to go anywhere? With all my business interests I got to stick in Boston or some mug will be chiselin' in on me. And then I'd have to—well, anyway, what I mean is I got to kid myself by fixin' this joint up to look like it is out in the sticks. So it's [illegible] it's sentiment, so I [illegible] out."

"It's certainly an unusual place," said Sheila [illegible]. She wished the answer would [illegible] Big Gus' message.

"[illegible]," said Big Gus. [illegible] Sheila noticed with [illegible] again and that the door leading to the [illegible] was shut. She had [illegible] Big Gus moved closer to her. "[illegible] the first time I seen you [illegible]

* * *

Big Gus turning soft was a mellow more ominous than Big Gus at the ringside, with cigar and derby, shouting "Tear him over! Kill him!"

What she couldn't know was that Big Gus actually was something of the sentimentalist he claimed to be. Born in a Charlestown tenement and orphaned at six, his most treasured memories were of boyhood days he'd spent in the kind care of a childless farm couple near [illegible]. Consequently, like [illegible], Harris, and many another gangster, his few harmless dreams were still of the sun rising over a back pasture and a gentle-faced woman frying pancakes as he brought in the morning wood. That was how he'd acquired his love of the country—bizarrely expressed in this downtown retreat, filled with the spoils of his rare hunting and fishing excursions, rarer in recent years as his lawless power and responsibilities had grown.

He called it being sentimental, but the truth was it expressed a softer side of his nature—the boy that had been and that would never quite die. And girls like Sheila appealed to that side. To a dim memory of peace and beauty and innocence, before he was hurled back to the turmoil of the city streets, to become a sneering canker on the face of society.

He was trying to fight down this feeling now—convincing himself he was a sucker to be like that. Never mind how sweet this girl looked. Hadn't he seen her with Brad Talton? And you didn't catch those rich society playboys wasting time and dough on a dame just because she looked sweet. She wasn't so dumb [illegible] What was she [illegible] so scared about now? Thinking she could put over that innocent gag on him!

And yet there was something about her [illegible] streak. . . He [illegible] to be [illegible] He'd forgotten [illegible] His eyes ran [illegible] figure [illegible] His big [illegible] and trembling. [illegible] the desk [illegible] her eyes were [illegible]

"[illegible]," he said.

[illegible]

"[illegible] "Listen!"

S[illegible] Sheila saw that all his interest was concentrated on a new presence in the room. Or rather a new voice. A voice coming from the [illegible]. The program [illegible]

* * *

A BEAUTIFUL [illegible] replaced the [illegible] loudness.

"My favorite song!" he said, in a [illegible] He [illegible] magically [illegible] and [illegible] he [illegible]

"Down by the o-old mill stream where I first met you, tum-te-tum [illegible] eyes of blue."

He made a clumsy pirouette somewhat in the manner of a dancing elephant, looked archly at Sheila to see if she was getting the full beauty and wonder of it all.

"Can that guy sing!" he said, reverently. "What a voice—'my village queee-een, down ow-own by-y-y the o-old mill stre-e-e-am'—now, ain't that wonderful?"

Sheila fought back hysterical laughter. Most of her fear of Big Gus vanished. She doubted whether she'd ever be afraid of him again, whether she'd ever be able to keep from laughing when she heard his name.

Yet she knew better than to laugh now. She recognized that here was a man who could be dangerous, even while he was ludicrous. In a sensitive flash of intuition, she plumbed the depths of his childish egotism, and saw at the same time, how that egotism was responsible for everything that made him Big Gus Mornick, the overlord of other childish egotists. Dangerous children of modern Boston playing with real guns and lives.

"Yes," she said, gravely, "it is wonderful."

Big Gus looked at her suspiciously.

"Well," he said, "I told you I was a sucker for sentiment. Nice sentiment. And say, you don't want to pay no attention to nothin' else. See? Because I was wrong. And don't get no idea I'm soft neither. Only a guy can make a mistake . . . Say, you look kind of washed out. You want a drink?"

"If you'd let me have some water."

Big Gus ambled hurriedly to a bar [illegible] jerked the cap from [illegible] and filled a glass to the [illegible]

[illegible] her real and dra[illegible] [illegible]," said Big Gus. [illegible] picked one that time [illegible] listen to the station announcement. [illegible]

[illegible] she tried to adjust herself to the changed situation. She [illegible] saying she knew. One reason she didn't was that she wasn't quite sure. Yet it would fit right into the general fantastic character of the evening.

Sheila had heard Vince Barton's [illegible] in song [illegible] he was wooing Del [illegible] whole Kelly family [illegible] neighbors. But that had been years ago, and, since Delphine's removal to Jamaica Plain, Ninth street hadn't seen or heard so much either of her or her husband. That is until Vince's hasty departure had caused Del to return with little Timmy to the parental roof.

Consequently, Sheila couldn't be absolutely sure that the voice on Gus Mornick's hidden radio was that of her missing brother-in-law. So, she, too listened anxiously for the station announcement.

* * *

"There's a voice that goes right through you like a slug, if you know what I mean," he declared. "Sentiment is what that bimbo's got. I wished he was here in Boston. I could fix a bimbo like that up with a real job."

When the announcement came, it was not very informative. The crooner, apparently, was called Morgan Stout and he was on some kind of a Hollywood talent program. Sheila realized then that she'd been foolish to expect to hear Vince Barton's name. After all, as long as he was a fugitive from matrimony, he wouldn't be likely to advertise his whereabouts quite so explicitly.

Still, she felt an inner certainty that it was Vince. Now she recalled it he was always talking about going to Hollywood, where he'd be appreciated. Well . . . she'd tell Delphine the moment she got home.

That wouldn't be long now, she hoped. In so far as she could read the strange character of her host, he seemed to have given up the idea of further love-making—or, at least, to have abandoned violent tactics. She didn't know why, because she could not penetrate into the cluttered dump-heap that was Gus Mornick's soul, but she was wholeheartedly thankful.

It seemed hours to her since she'd opened that narrow door, thinking Mickey was just inside. Actually, it had been less than 20 minutes. But minutes that she hoped she'd never have to live over again.

"I got to give it to you, girlie," he said. "When I see you with that Talton

STILL "TOPS"... after 31 Years As a Tobacco Auctioneer

LUCKY STRIKE

"There was a buyer naturally for every one of those 480,000 pounds... but there was as much difference between the best grades and the inferior, as between a pretty girl and a homely one.

"At auction after auction, I've seen Lucky Strike go after the prettiest lots of tobacco. It's no wonder Luckies taste so good. I've smoked them since 1917.

"And another thing... even after yelling out tobacco bids all during a seven hour day, Luckies are still just as easy as ever on my throat."

Only Lucky Strike offers you the finest tobacco plus the throat protection of the exclusive process "It's Toasted". This process takes out certain irritants found in all tobacco—even the finest.

Men who know tobacco from A to Z—experts like Mr. Edwards—are surely good judges of cigarettes. Sworn records show that, among independent tobacco experts, Luckies have twice as many exclusive smokers as have all the other cigarettes combined.

Bruins Better Than Records | Boston Scoring Officials "Tough"

By BILL GRIMES

Any fan who judges the Bruins solely on the basis of the official N. H. L. individual records, is not giving our home town boys a square shake.

BILL GRIMES

Although the Bruins have won three more games and have five more points than any other club in the N. H. L., Bill Cowley, Cooney Weiland and Ray Getliffe are the only Rossmen among the first twenty-five players in the race for individual honors.

True, the Bruins have scored 16 less goals than Maple Leafs and trail Rangers by six, but, that is not the explanation, for the lack of competition on the part of the Rossmen for scoring laurels.

Supposedly, there are set rules for scoring. But with the exception of Boston—unfortunately for the Bruins—official scorers have their own codes, especially as regards assists.

About the only slight registered against home players is the failure to credit a goal to two players.

Around the N. H. L. circuit official scorers hand out assists, particularly to the home players, as though they were cigar store coupons. New York started the trouble years ago when the scorers insisted upon including all three members of the Cook-Boucher-Cook line in every scoring play. It has always been a simple matter for the home team players to be credited with assists in Montreal and Detroit and the same holds true for Chicago. Toronto and Boston were the tough spots but of late the Queen City scorer has yielded to pressure and right now is just about the softest "touch" in the league.

AUSTEN LAKE

IT IS A MATTER OF NO CONSEQUENCE and wholly irrelevant to the subject under hand, but as I was returning from Fenway Park this morning a friend in the retail stimulant business with a fine sideline of soda, ginger ale and potato chips, pressed upon me a bottle of Bourbon. Bourbon, as you may or may not know, is a spirituous blend of Corn and Wheat which in liquid form, the Kentuckians call "barreled sunlight."

Now, it is no secret that I partake practically of nothing in the line of boisterous waters, although I am by no means a teetotaller either. I believe that such matters are for individual conscience on the American theory of self-determination. So, I accepted the Bourbon rather than hurt the donor's feelings and because, at the moment, I have a painful crick between the shoulder blades. Mild dosages of the stuff, I hear, are a boon to cricks and sprains

Pardon me just a moment! Ordinarily, you realize, I do not care for Bourbon but this crick is really aggravating.

Bob Daughters Signs Sox Contract

By JOE CASHMAN

Red Sox contracts won't be mailed out until next week, but already one of the Fenway [illegible] has signed. Watertown Bob Daughters, former Holy Cross star, visited the Jersey street office to say hello to Eddie Collins and, before leaving, accepted terms for 1938.

Daughters was famed as [illegible] South with the Sox [illegible] was tried out in the outfield as well as at the [illegible] returns after [illegible] at Rocky Mount listed as a [illegible] chaser.

Bob Quinn, Bees Boss, is one National Leaguer who has never missed an initial showing of the A. L. film but he fears he'll have to pass up tomorrow night's show. The Allston "press" has all but decided to start on the morrow for Moline, Ill., for a meeting at which will be discussed a proposed merger of the bigger cities in the now defunct Western League and the stronger franchises of the Three I League into a new Class B circuit.

Mr Boston

IT IS LIKELY that Joe Glasgow, sturdy Quincy middleweight, and "Young" Jack Dempsey, Jack Sharkey's ring protege, will be rematched by the Goodwin Club for a Garden bout . . . Glasgow won the unanimous decision over Dempsey in one of the preliminary bouts on the McCoy-Lenglet card . . . It was a hard, bitter fight with Glasgow's rally in the last two rounds gaining for him the decision.

When Glasgow makes his next Boston ring appearance, a large group of members of the Quincy Lodge of Elks will be at the ringside . . . Glasgow's sportsmanship and fighting qualities have won for him many rooters among the members of the Quincy Lodge of Elks and elsewhere.

Harry Kelley bobbed into the office with the information he has signed Joe Papke, 188 pounds, 22 years old, of the West End . . . Papke did some amateur boxing, but is now ready to toss leather at the professionals . . . Kelley, of course, is eager to see Papke develop into a heavyweight.

Dan Carroll is taking in the races at Hialeah Park in Florida, and basking in the sun on the beach mornings . . . Elmer Foote post cards from Nassau that he has all situations well in hand . . . Joe Roberts, who trained Mike Ward's horses, is shipping his thoroughbreds from New Orleans to Havana in the hope he will have better luck at Lou Smith's track

President James H. Connors of Suffolk Downs will leave Boston for Miami, Fla., on January 28 . . . While in Florida, Connors will sign up some crack racing stables for the East Boston race meeting . . . It is likely that the Racing Commission will announce the racing dates for Massachusetts before the head of Suffolk Downs leaves for Florida . . . Governor Robert E. Quinn asked the Massachusetts authorities to delay setting the racing dates for this State until the first of February in the hope that the Narragansett racing situation would be adjusted by that time . . . Rhode Island is very anxious to get back into the racing picture as soon as possible.

Red Sox Hunting For First Sacker

HAVE WASDELL IN MIND

[illegible]

The Boston Red Sox are toying with the idea of shifting Jimmy Foxx back to the catching assignment—provided, always, that they can come up with someone to take his place on first.

With that in mind, they made overtures to the White Sox for Zeke Bonura this Winter but it didn't go so well. However the Messrs. Tom Yawkey and Eddie Collins are still looking over the situation, but Connie Mack might tell them Foxx wasn't altogether a howling success back of the plate in Philadelphia.

Olympic Champs Meet Mayor

IRVING JAFFEE MAYOR TOBIN BIRGER RUDD

Two great Olympic champions paying their respects to Mayor Maurice J. Tobin at City Hall. It was an occasion of rejoicing when Birger Rudd of Norway, world's greatest ski jumper, met up once again with Irving Jaffee, director of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser Silver Skates Derby. Jaffee, world and Olympic champion is to speed skating what Ruud is to skiing. The latter made Boston his first stop in a two months honeymoon trip to United States in which he will engage in a series of "open" competitions.

By WALTER KILEY

A storm of international proportions revolving around the age-old controversy of amateurism vs. professionalism may be breaking shortly, the arrival in this country of Birger Ruud of Norway, the "Babe Ruth of skiing," bringing the issue to the fore at the moment.

Ruud, who made Boston his first stop on his honeymoon trip to United States, is at North Conway, New Hampshire, today trying out the White Mountain slopes in preparation for his two-months' tour of nation-wide competition.

The issue, which will probably turn out to be heated before he and his lovely brunette bride Magda, a childhood sweetheart, and Brother Sigmund, twice world champion, return to native Konigsberg, has to do with the conflicting European and American ski rules on endorsing merchandise and making a living out of the sport.

TWICE OLYMPIC CHAMP

Herein is a conflict which to date has worked out most advantageously to the European, and yet works a hardship on the American.

Ruud, three times world, twice Olympic champion in ski jumping and acknowledged the world's greatest, will, he insists, remain an amateur, retaining his standing during his many competitions in this country.

"OPEN" MEETS ONLY

He will enter only "open" meets held under Federation International Ski Association rules, his first official appearance coming next Sunday in a meet at Cary, Illinois.

In any event Birger and Sigmund have their merchandise with them, and while they're showing this side how they do it over there, they will be selling ski equipment too.

MEETS JAFFEE

The big difference between Norwegian and American ski habits is the deadly earnestness and the vengeance with which our athletes tackle the downhill game, Birger relates through his interpreter.

"In Norway we love skiing," he tells. "We go for whole days with our knapsacks on our back. We don't concentrate on jumping or thrills.

Birger was more than pleased after his Boston airplane arrival to be greeted by Irving Jaffee, director of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser Silver Skates Derby.

They first met at the Olympic games of 1932 at Lake Placid when Birger was winning his first major title. Between the pair they boast five Olympic championships, Ruud two in ski jumping and Jaffee three in speed skating.

Co-operative Regime Off to Good Start

Roosevelt Parley With Business Is Good Sign

By LEWIS HANEY

(Professor of Economics, New York University)

Special to Boston Evening American

NEW YORK, Jan. 13—The President has moved quickly to find out the possibility of "co-operation" with business. He has had a conference with five leaders of "big business." Incidentally, Mr. Donald Richberg was present. What does this mean?

First, it means that Mr. Roosevelt admits the failure of the New Deal as a means of bringing recovery and prosperity. He feels compelled to call in and consult business leaders.

This conference was evidently arranged with great care. (The very skill with which it all seemed just to happen, proves that.) The naive manner in which the President told newspaper men that he did not originate the idea, shows how he feels that he must save his "face."

Second, his guests are not a handpicked group of New Deal sympathizers. Most of them are independent, honest opponents of the New Deal.

GOOD SIGN

Third, the presence of Mr. Richberg, despite the elaborate attempt to make it seem accodinetal, is very significant. It looks as if Mr. Roosevelt is considering a return to Mr. Richberg's line of thought.

What, then, does Richberg stand for?

It can be said that he is not a radical. He is not a Communist, red or pink.

Of course, we know he is not a conservative. But I can say that I agree with most of his views.

For example, here is what he said about labor in a speech made last January. He opposed fixing minimum wages and maximum hours by the federal government.

He truly said that we cannot fix wages without "fixing by law all prices of labor products" and controlling production and consumption." "Once this circle of government responsibilities has been entered, we will be forced step by step to submit our fortunes to the tyrannical control of an all-powerful state."

He favored mediation, conciliation and arbitration agencies for settling labor disputes.

"FOOLS' PARADISE"

It is true that Richberg fell rather hard for the NRA, but not as blindly and raucously as some others. And he does not now advocate any return to that "fools' paradise."

Richberg favors government study and leadership for the purpose of eliminating "destructive" competition, conflicts between employers and employes, and cyclical disturbances.

But he does not now favor the taking over of private business by federal government, even for the purpose of providing employment.

He would go a little further than I think best, to "devise controls within the system of private property." But he opposes, as I do, a system of exterior political control which in the end would mean the destruction of private capitalism.

Wool Industry Faces Big Loss

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (AP)—James G. Brown, Colorado Wool Growers Association official, said today the wool industry faced a $168,000,000 loss on 1937-38 lambs and wool because of the depressed market and the prospect wool textiles would be included in a proposed reciprocal trade agreement with great Britain.

"Everybody in the wool industry, including manufacturers and dealers as well as growers, is scared to death at the prospect of the treaty negotiations," said Brown, who is chairman of the wool committee of the association.

TO CONFER WITH JONES

He said he would confer with Jesse Jones, chairman of the reconstruction finance corporation, to seek a loan of about $15,000,000 to "stabilize the wool market by putting a floor under the prices in prospect at this time."

Brown said he told Secretary of Agriculture Wallace that "if the government does not want to make the wool industry the goat in this proposed treaty, it can withhold concessions on wool textiles, such as are proposed for inclusion in the treaty, and assure domestic consumption of home-grown wool in the next two years and collect every cent of the loan we are asking plus interest."

Brown said the industry is facing "these possible losses: $12,000,000 on 8,000,000 lambs now being marketed, $46,000,000 on an estimated 23,000,000 lamb crop for 1938, and $110,000,000 on the shrinkage of 1937 carryover wool clip and an estimated 1938 clip of about 400,000,000 pounds of wool."

"Almost every state would suffer in these losses," Brown said, "because there are sheep in almost every state—even Rhode Island has some 4000 head."

Brown said agricultural department records showed the average price for wool for the 22-year period 1916-37 was $1.10 per clean pound, delivered in Boston. He said the wool industry would ask the RFC to lend to wool marketing agencies "on a basis of an 83 cent per pound price."

"The wool market now is stagnant," Brown said. "If the treaty is negotiated to allow Great Britain to send wool textiles into this country at a low duty not only the wool producers but the manufacturers also will be forced out of business."

Better Times Dependent on You and Me

"Let George Do It" Is Not the Right Attitude

By B. C. FORBES

"Let George Do It" is not the right attitude for any of us to adopt at this time.

It is not enough for President Roosevelt to call upon business and industrial leaders to stem expansion of unemployment. It is not enough for business and industrial leaders to sit back and await constructive action by Washington. You and I, ordinary citizens, should feel a sense of responsibility, since, collectively, we constitute a far more important factor than either President Roosevelt or all our business leaders combined.

Admittedly, the country awaits effective conciliatory and co-operative action by President Roosevelt and Congress. His conferences with outstanding industrial and utility leaders are encouraging symptoms.

Gratifying, too, are recent statements by certain industrialists that they plan to invest millions in plant renovation and construction.

But, after all, you and I, ordinary citizens, ordinary consumers, are the ones who can and will bring about either recovery or further contraction in business and contraction in employment.

SAVINGS DEPOSITS

Infinitely more dynamic in curing depression would be increased spending by you and me than increased spending by the federal government.

Suppose each of us possessing savings were to make up our minds to draw on them to the extent of 10 per cent for the purpose of acquiring additional necessaries or comforts, the fillip imparted to business and industry would be greater than all the money the administration proposes to hand out in work relief.

Perhaps you feel offhand, as I do, under existing and prospective uncertainties that the wisest course to pursue is one of extreme conservatism in the matter of spending.

But if everybody were to curtail spending drastically, the inevitable result would be intensification of depression and a tremendous increase in unemployment.

On the other hand, if you and I and all other ordinary consumers, should grasp the importance of the service we could render the nation by increasing our expenditures 10 per cent, the beneficial fruits would be beyond calculation.

Therefore, it is unpatriotic for any earner, high or humble, to disclaim any responsibility by declaring, "Let George do it."

AUTO SITUATION

Motor manufacturers tell me that, because of the existing glut in the market, used automobiles can be purchased substantially below their real value.

I bought my first automobile early this century, bought it when my income was rather modest.

I have always felt that I got more out of every dollar spent for a car than from any other purchase.

Therefore, I would strongly advise taking advantage of the extraordinary bargains today available in used cars. Purchasers will not only get more than their money's worth, but they can have the satisfaction of knowing that they are contributing to starting the nation on a new movement forwards and upwards.

Malden-Natick Game Tops Eastern Slate

With four of the eight teams still in the running for the circuit championship, the Eastern Hockey League swings into its semifinal session tomorrow afternoon at the Arena.

Malden high school, setting the pace with a half game lead over Brockton, faces the stiffest test of the day against third place Natick.

Its fine victory over Hudson last week proved that the Natick outfit will be at full speed for this game.

LAMB LEADS

Though not among the leading scorers, Ferguson is regarded as one of the finest players in the loop.

Coach Charlie McGeoch is not taking this game lightly. The Malden mentor intends to use his high scoring line of Charlie Hanifan, Paul Lamb and Walter Lipnosky for the greater part of the game as he has been doing all season.

Second place Brockton, after dropping from the top of the league ladder for the first time this year last week, will try to hit the comeback trail against Lexington high.

SOMERVILLE DOWN

Both teams registered their first wins of the season last week after being on the short end of the betting.

Brookline has found a new star in Jimmy McGuire, who batted home the only score of the Brockton upset and Wednesday repeated to whip Malden Catholic.

Coach Nick DeSalvo has a new first line of Phil Tilton, Ernie Weldul and Dave McKinnon, which is sure to give Brookline's classy goalie, Francis Sharkey, a busy afternoon.

Waltham, Needham In Feature Role In Evening

Waltham high school will attempt to extend the win streak to five games when it faces the Needham high sextet in the feature tilt of the weekly Bay State Hockey League session tomorrow night at the Arena.

The opening game—starting at 7 p. m.—finds Quincy meeting Wellesley, followed by the B. C. High-Framingham fray. Walpole opens the second half of the program against Watertown, with Waltham closing against Needham.

Provided the Watch City club has no let-down in its play, it should not encounter too much difficulty in downing Needham. After the fine showing of last week against Walpole, Waltham appears to be well on its way to repeat for the title.

The first line, paced by Capt. Art Shaughnessy with Don Harvey and Len Richardson on the wings has all the earmarks of the classiest trio in the loop.

Needham's big offensive punch rests with Bob Schmalz, husky left winger. Needham was impressive in its win over Watertown but there is slight chance that the team is powerful enough to pin the first defeat of the season on Waltham.

Little hope is held out for the Quincy six to register its first win of the season against third place Wellesley.

Wellesley, boasting two of the league's three top scorers in Ernie Garron and Ed Barry, has failed to live up to pre-season promise but still has the punch to carry through to a victory over the Granite City six.

Second place Framingham will find B. C. high no pop-over in the second game of the night's schedule.

The Eaglets have come out of a long slump to become a dangerous team. Should Bob Mason get a bit of assistance from the rest of the Jim Moran team, there 's the possibility of an upset here.

The Harry Lawson crew had an easy time against Quincy last week as every player in uniform played to edge the team into an undisputed runner-up position.

Walpole handed Waltham a scare last week as Bill Harrison hit his stride, and he should find opportunity in this game to add points to his individual scoring record.

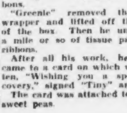
WIN LOSES

Thompson, Clapper Even With Green

For about 10 years, "Tiny" Thompson and "Dit" Clapper have been waiting for a chance to put something over on Win Green, the Bruin trainer. Their wait was not in vain.



'Dit' Clapper

Green was in bed when the package arrived so Mrs. Green brought it up to him. As Win described the package, it was big enough to hold a chair and a couple of sofa pillows. And it was all done up in fancy paper and ribbons.

"Greenie" removed the outer wrapper and lifted off the cover of the box. Then he unwrapped a mile or so of tissue paper and ribbons.

After all his work, he finally came to a card on which was written, "Wishing you a speedy recovery," signed "Tiny" and "Dit."

The card was attached to EIGHT sweet peas.

Best Year for Curtiss-Wright

After completing the most successful year in its history, Curtiss-Wright Corporation is entering 1938 with a peak backlog of unfilled orders which points to still larger operations during the current year.

Although the exact amount of unfilled business has not been disclosed, it is understood the total is between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000. This would compare with about $16,300,000 at the end of 1936 and with $17,652,468 on March 12, 1937, the latest official figure reported by the corporation.

From a profit standpoint Curtiss-Wright approximately doubled its earning power during 1937. Early estimates indicate that net profits for the year were somewhat more than $2,000,000, against $1,017,657 in 1936. The 1937 results were equal to upwards of $1.75 a share on the Class A shares, against 88 cents per Class A share in 1936.

Liberty Mutual in New Home

Nine-Story Structure Has Offices for 1200 Employes

Liberty Mutual Insurance Company's new building at 175 Berkeley street, housing the headquarters for the company's 75 branch offices throughout the country, opened today.

The nine-story structure contains offices for 1200 employes and among its features is a lunch room where employes may prepare their own meals. In a "safety laboratory" tests will be made to help eliminate all types of industrial accidents.

Today's opening of the new home of the company climaxes a quarter-century of progress toward national leadership in its field by Liberty Mutual, S. Bruce Black, president of the company declared, adding:

"Our building is a symbol that binds together all our branches. It is dedicated to increased service to the public and this service assures continuing opportunities for the company and, we believe, for Boston."

Chester Lindsay Churchill designed the building and Hollis French was consulting engineer. Turner Construction Company were general contractors.

The building also houses the United Mutual Fire Insurance Company, an associate of Liberty Mutual.

Conferences to Date Fail to Provide Definite News

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

While it must be admitted that the current series of Washington political-business get-togethers are indicative of a co-operative spirit, it also must be noted that chief beneficiaries to date are those gentlemen concerned with writing headlines. Tangible developments are limited to the fact meetings are taking place almost daily.

If any one industry has progressed further than others in its conferences with the administration we would say it is electric utilities. This may seem strange but when one gets down to brass tacks and brushes away the polite exchange of compliments paid by business conferees there is little or nothing left. Certainly no hint of a concrete program of what is going to be done to help revive business and positively no suggestion of an altered legislative attitude. Insofar as Washington dispatches are concerned all that this writer can discern is that an effort—no promise—will be made to avoid duplication of private utility distribution systems, that sale of power from federal projects to private companies may be arranged under certain conditions and finally that the administration may undertake to help restore confidence of investors in utility operating companies so that junior money for plant expansion will be more readily available. If there is more to the situation than this someone should undertake to tell the people such things.

COTTON GOODS

A buying wave which reached boomlet proportions and exceeded anything witnessed since early 1937 has swept eastern markets this week. As a result a real note of cheer is seen in New England textile circles particularly as buyers contracted for deliveries in late January and February and, in some cases, were willing to contract for March. And nearly all affected lines moved at advancing prices. It is the expectation of the trade that volume will hold and prices tend to work higher, at least until production costs are reached. Then price appreciation may, as is usual, have to compete with increased output.

• • •

The chief factors behind the better demand for cotton goods are said to be depleted inventories, better than expected retail sales and a firm cotton market. If this be so, the first is in no great danger of vanishing in the near future, the second is more than likely to hold up for the present on the basis of attractive prices while the third, in no danger of a riotous rise, at least has the ever present hope of government support in the shape of a farm bill.

MARKET TEST HERE

The test of the market's position which we have been awaiting is at hand. The rails have approximated the high point which the industrials on a comparative basis have already exceeded. Should they make a successful sortie at this time it will definitely look as though the long sidewise movement which is roughly bounded by the November lows and the October rally highs represents a real period of accumulation prior to a upswing of intermediate proportions. All this even though it may only represent a reversal in a bear market.

• • •

In common with everyone else, the writer dislikes to think the rails will fail to fulfill their obligations at this time. But since it is an ever-present possibility, and one that would bode ill for stock prices readers are again advised to be on the alert. A volume downturn now can only mean heavy selling from those who have either lost faith or believe their hopes of awhile back were too optimistic.

Suspends Service Charge Rule

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (AP)—The governing committee of the New York Stock Exchange repealed a section of its rules adopted December 29, specifying minimum service charges on inactive accounts, and ordered a further study of the matter.

A schedule calling for a minimum of $2 monthly on accounts carrying a debit balance of less than $1000 or a credit balance of less than $2500 had been prescribed.

It was reported there had been a large number of protests.

Bank Clearings Report 17.4 P.C. Decrease

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (AP)—Bank clearings in 22 leading cities for the week ended January 12 totaled $4,912,502,000, a drop of 17.4 per cent under the $5,945,371,000 in the comparable 1937 week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

The January 12 week total was $592,824,000 less than clearings for the preceding week of five days, which included first-of-the-month settlements. A year ago, the decline between comparable weeks was $898,464,000.

Turnover at New York fell to $3,014,069,000, a loss of 19.8 per cent from $3,759,808,000 in the like week last year. Aggregate at outside centers stood at $1,898,433,000, a drop of 13.1 per cent from $2,185,562,000 for the corresponding 1937 week.

Declines predominated at outside centers including: Pittsburgh, 25.1 per cent; Detroit, 22.9; New Orleans, 21.4; Boston, 20.3; Buffalo, 15.1; Cincinnati, 14.2, and Baltimore, 13.2.

Clearings at Chicago totaled $294,800,000, a drop of 16.1 per cent from $351,400,000 a year ago.

Franc Lowest Since 1926

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (AP)—Collapsing under the weight of the monetary crisis in Paris, the French franc today reached the lowest point since the panicky days of 1926 when the devalued currency—known as the Poincare franc—was arbitrarily valued at 3.93 cents after plunging to around 3 cents.

At one time around noon today the franc reached 3.23½ cents and then recovered slightly to 3.25 cents, off 11½ of a cent from yesterday's close.

Financial circles here watched the Parisian developments closely to see what steps Premier Camille Chautemps would take to settle the disputes between capital and labor and to end the economic uncertainty which has prevailed for the past week.

It was said in banking quarters the British and American governments have given some support in the past few days to the franc, the American control buying francs and selling dollars yesterday.

While the French control was still reportedly supporting the franc somewhat in the market today—to keep the downward spiral from assuming more violent proportions—financial circles said the support was less than that of the past few days when around $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 a day was spent by France alone to hold the franc up.

The British pound sterling, Belgian belga and Swiss franc were slightly lower, in terms of the dollar. The Paris bourse, contrary to the franc's position, closed strong in industrial issues and government bonds.

Bankers Trust Co. Earnings Rise

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (AP)—The Bankers Trust Company of New York had net operating earnings last year of $7,396,144 against $7,326,847 in 1936, S. Sloan Colt, the president, told shareholders at an annual meeting today.

In addition, he said, $1,228,013 was credited to undivided profits representing recoveries from reserves and miscellaneous credits.

Continental Can

Many Leaders Lack Rallying Stamina

NEW YORK, Jan. 13—Stocks resisted quiet selling in today's market and a few gold mines, utilities, rails and specialties displayed rising inclinations.

Volume dwindled substantially after a moderately slow opening and early declines running to a point or so were reduced, cancelled or converted into small advances near the fourth hour.

Dampening buying ardor to some extent was another sharp slump in the French franc, reflecting further unsettlement of political and labor conditions in the republic and reports the unit may have to be revalued further downward.

At the same time most trading forces seemed disinclined to dump commitments in view of some improvement in business sentiment and possibility a recovery program may be mapped out at next Wednesday's conference between the President and the nation's industrial leaders.

Bonds on the whole, did better. Commodities were uneven. A slight dip in export copper prices, attributed partly to realizing on the recent upturn in the metal, failed to disturb copper shares to any noticeable extent.

FAVORED SHARES

Favored the greater part of the day—a few slipped subsequently—were Dome, McIntyre, Homestake, Alaska Juneau, Columbia Gas, Consolidated Edison, Electric Power & Light, American Water Works, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Great Northern, Cerro de Pasco, Westinghouse, National Steel, Canada Dry, Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit, Omnibus Corp., and J. I. Case.

Unchanged to off slightly were Bethlehem, Youngstown, Caterpillar Tractor, Goodyear, Douglas Aircraft, Anaconda, Allied Chemical, Loew's, International Harvester and Johns-Manville.

Utilities had the benefit of announcement Consolidated Edison's new $30,000,000 bond issue had been oversubscribed with over-the-counter sales made at a premium.

The gold mining group again derived stimulation from lower operating costs and the belief the government's price for the yellow metal would be maintained if not raised.

Granting of a boost in commodity rates for Pennsylvania railroads by the state utility commission was helpful to the carriers.

Columbia G. & E. Registers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (INS)—The Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation, one of the nation's large power empires, today registered with SEC as required under the Utility Holding Company Act.

Deciding not to wait until the Supreme Court rules on constitutionality of the registration provisions of the act, Columbia informed the commission it preferred to accede to the act now.

The company, whose assets total $715,000,000 and whose earnings last year were $94,110,000, controls 40 subsidiaries in Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana and Michigan.

Columbia's action was praised by Commission Chairman William O. Douglas.

"The commission welcomes the decision of the company to register and to join in tackling some of the common problems faced both by the government and the utility industry," Douglas said.

See Television as Next Big Industry

Several years ago he predicted that air-conditioning would become a huge manufacturing business. Today, Charles F. Kettering, vice-president in charge of research of General Motors Corp., indicates that television, in his opinion, would be the next large industry in the United States.

"In fact, television is here right now," Kettering said. "In England more than 10,000 television sets have been manufactured and sold. It is just a matter of time before the manufacture of television sets in this country will be started. How soon that will be I cannot say."

Recession Was Anticipated by Mont. Ward

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
International News Service Financial Writer

IN THE MIDDLE WEST, Jan. 13—The efforts of the new management of Montgomery Ward & Co., headed by Sewell Avery, the president, to bring the mail order catalogue into step with modern concepts of style and loveliness met a public response in 1937 in orders resulting in a shipment of upwards of 40,000,000 separate packages, compared with a pre-depression peak of 25,000,000 in 1929.

Likewise, in connection with the effort to divorce the catalogue from the symbols of the vaudeville jokers, Mr. Avery recently made a survey as to the types of people who buy from the catalogue as disclosed by the case histories of upwards of 40,000 instalment buyers. The survey smashed the "hick" illusion, showing only 22 per cent of the customers to be farmers, and the remainder to be a cross-section of the various occupations in the country.

SATISFACTORY YEAR

In spite of the 1 per cent decline reported by the company for December, Mr. Avery disclosed that the company had had a satisfactory year, though profits for the 12 months ending January 31 next may, after adjustments, be down moderately from a year ago. Apparently the management was not caught unprepared by the slump. As long ago as April the expansion program on projecting ahead new and additional retail outlets was suspended, and the company bought merchandise sparingly during most of the year.

Its inventory position is no larger than a year ago. As a matter of fact, the company at this stage could use $60,000,000 of additional merchandise, but its management is scanning the economic horizon carefully before making commitments and is still buying from hand to mouth. Its new spring catalogue is already on the presses, and inside the management plans are already under way for the autumn catalogue.

By the end of the year the company had retired its bank loans. Its instalment accounts are reported in good condition.

Under Mr. Avery's leadership, the company top executives have regular weekly economic clinics in which the activities of the stores and the catalogue departments are interpreted in the light of outside economic conditions.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

Mr. Avery has not yet seen much evidence of full awareness of the current depression by the general public except in groups directly affected by layoffs. He did observe, however, that in the Christmas shopping there was greater than normal demand for solid merchandise rather than trinkets.

Mr. Avery sees in the recession the pyramiding of wage rate advances in prices beyond the buying power of the public, whose purchasing power has been cut one-fifth by direct and indirect tax contributions to government. He was concerned by the tendency to raise hourly wage rates and shorten hours of work per week to the extent that the creation of real wealth is curtailed.

The merchants who have let inventory run down as a matter of policy are watching general developments like a hawk, especially inflationary suggestions from Senator Thomas who would like to desterilize the treasury's gold hoard.

MUCH TO PRAISE

Business men out here saw much to praise in the recent diagnosis of the depression by Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System.

At this time when many Washington officials are beefing against "monopolistic" price rises, there is a feeling out this way that the mail order houses and chain stores will temporarily come into their own. During the previous price raising epoch, these scientific merchandising agencies were damned for pricing articles so low that the little merchant had difficulty in competing.

National Ingot Rate Stepped Up

CLEVELAND, T., Jan. 13 (AP)—Daily Metal Trade today said that further expansion in steelmaking operations at important producing points has stepped up the national ingot rate three points to 29 per cent of capacity.

This gain extends the encouraging upturn which followed the New Year holiday and while the outlook for the immediate futures continues uncertain producers are confident that a slow but steady rise in production will be experienced through the remainder of the current quarter. New business is coming in slowly and in small lots.

Here's 4th Jingle In Prize Contest

FREDRIC MARCH CAROLE LOMBARD WALTER CONNOLLY

Here are your last two chances to share in the list of cash prizes and guest theater tickets in the Jingle contest, sponsored by the Boston Evening American and Loew's State and Orpheum theaters.

Today's is the fourth in a series of five jingles. The fifth and last one will be printed tomorrow. You must fill out all five in order to become eligible for one of the prizes.

Begin it today. It's very simple. All you have to do is furnish the last line.

A hard man was Editor Stone,
A fellow who had to be shown,
But he fell for a tale
That was simply a whale

Now you fill in the last line. It's easier than you think!

The idea for this contest was inspired by the David O. Selznick all-technicolor production of the sensational comedy, "Nothing Sacred," starring Carole Lombard and Fredric March, opening tomorrow at both Loew's State and Orpheum theaters.

Mail your complete set of five jingles to the "Nothing Sacred" Jingle Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston.

Following is the list of prizes: First prize, $15; second, $10; third, $5; fourth, $3, and fifth, $2. Twenty-five persons will each receive a pair of guest theater tickets to see "Nothing Sacred," the first comedy ever presented on the screen in technicolor.

Best Snap of DeMille Will Win Filmland Trip

Just a few hours' fun next Tuesday—January 18—and you may win A FREE TRIP TO HOLLYWOOD with ALL EXPENSES PAID WHILE THERE!

That, camera fans, is the pleasant prospect for you.

The Boston Sunday Advertiser, Paramount Studios and Cecil B. De Mille, famous producer-director of Paramount, have arranged it for you.

Mr. DeMille is coming to Boston next Tuesday in connection with a Boston preview of his latest great picture, "The Buccaneers," which will have its public showing later at the Metropolitan Theater here. He'll be here only one day.

For the amateur camera fan that gets the BEST PICTURE of Mr. DeMille during his Boston visit, the FREE TRIP TO HOLLYWOOD WITH ALL EXPENSES PAID awaits.

In Hollywood, the Boston winner will meet winners from four other cities. The five will be taken through the Paramount studios. They'll see the Paramount stars. They'll see movies made and stills made.

And, then—

Paramount will select one of the five for a GRAND PRIZE—a prize that's to be announced later and that will be in addition to the FREE TRIP TO HOLLYWOOD WITH ALL EXPENSES PAID WHILE THERE.

This great award is being offered in connection with the Boston Sunday Advertiser's Amateur Photography Competition, through which amateur camera fans throughout New England have been winning valuable prizes each week, merely by indulging their hobby and sending in their pictures to the Boston Sunday Advertiser Amateur Photography Editor.

IN NEXT SUNDAY'S BOSTON SUNDAY ADVERTISER, DETAILS OF MR. DEMILLE'S VISIT NEXT TUESDAY WILL BE ANNOUNCED. CAMERA FANS CAN THEN LEARN WHERE MR. DEMILLE WILL BE AT VARIOUS HOURS THROUGHOUT THE DAY.

Other details, in addition to Mr. DeMille's plans for his Boston visit, will also be published in next Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Recover 10 Bodies After Mine Blast

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 13 (AP)—Weary rescue crews brought to the snow-covered mouth of the Harwick mine today the last body of 10 men killed in an explosion two miles back in the pit yesterday.

As rescue workers came up the shaft, state mine inspectors immediately prepared to go down in an attempt to learn the cause of the blast that partly wrecked a passageway while 35 men were cleaning the idel mine.

HEART TROUBLE

Mrs. Arthur Andrews, 56 Lucerne Road, Springfield, Mass., says: For six years I had suffered from palpitation of the heart, anemia and nerve disease. I had been treated at clinics and by local doctors. But they did not help me. I read of Dr. Walsh and had him treat me. When I went to Dr. Walsh I was terribly tired and sleepless, and I had stomach trouble. Since Dr. Walsh treated me I feel more better. I sleep good, do my housework without feeling tired. I make this statement hoping that others who suffer as I did may profit by my experience and get cured of their troubles.

Signed, Mrs. Arthur Andrews.

+ A man that hath friends must show himself friendly; and there is a Friend that sticketh closer than a brother.—Proverbs XVIII., 24. +

What More Concerns the Public Weal Than War?

THE Ludlow Amendment to refer the question of war or peace to a popular referendum has been tabled by Congress and wisely.

Moreover the Ludlow Amendment, in its present form, is doubtless not the kind of an amendment which should be passed at any time.

But there are, nevertheless and notwithstanding, certain kinds of aggressive warfare which should not be entered into by the United States WITHOUT THE CONSENT OF THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES.

THE DUTY, therefore, which still confronts a Democratic Congress is to determine and define this particular kind of aggressive warfare, and then pass a measure compelling the submission by referendum vote to the people of the United States the question of the declaration and prosecution of that unnecessary and undesired kind of warfare.

In the discussion which has raged around the Ludlow Amendment, each side has pictured possible extreme instances in critical situations which would make the Ludlow Amendment desirable or undesirable, beneficial or dangerous.

These instances are all imaginary ones, conjured up to support the arguments of protagonists or antagonists of the amendment.

But why should the Congress and the public not consider AN ACTUAL CASE as an example, instead of an imaginary case?

In those years the United States of America followed its traditional policy and kept "free from foreign entanglements."

In 1916 Woodrow Wilson went before the country for re-election largely on the issue that he had kept the United States out of war.

He was re-elected President on that issue in November of 1916.

In 1917 President Wilson was no sooner safely ensconced in the White House than he PUT THE UNITED STATES INTO THE EUROPEAN WAR.

As a matter of fact and date he was inaugurated on March fourth, 1917, and put the country into war on April sixth, 1917.

DOES ANYONE CONTEND that it was NOT democratic and desirable to have had the people of the United States consulted on the vital question of whether the United States should violate its tradition of keeping free of European entanglements before President Wilson took the responsibility of precipitating the nation into the European conflict?

Does anyone contend that President Wilson and the Democratic party did NOT conduct the Presidential campaign largely on the issue that the Democratic Administration had kept the United States out of the European war, and that therefore the Administration should be trusted to continue to keep the United States out of war?

Does anyone contend that the election was NOT, in considerable part, a referendum on whether the United States should participate in the European war or not?

Does anyone contend that the American people, in supporting Wilson for re-election, did NOT endorse his declared policy of keeping the country out of war, and enjoin him—as far as it was in their power—to continue to keep the country out of war?

This election then was largely a REFERENDUM on the question of war; BUT THE REFERENDUM WAS NOT BINDING ON THE PRESIDENT.

The people of the United States expressed their opinion, but the President disregarded their opinion. He defied their decree.

A PROPER PHRASING of the Ludlow Amendment, which admittedly is not properly phrased, would prevent the President of the United States or the Congress of the United States from projecting this nation into war IN DEFIANCE OF THE WILL OF THE PEOPLE.

And that kind of a measure would undoubtedly be entirely democratic and extremely desirable in any case which might arise similar to the Wilson situation in 1917.

Whenever, therefore, there is ample time for consideration of the question of peace or war, and when there is no immediate threat or danger to the United States of hostile action by a foreign nation, and when there is a possibility of the United States being projected into war—by reason of personal prejudice or personal ambition among the politicians of the country—surely in such case, if this country is a democracy, there would be ample opportunity and ample occasion and ample reason to allow the people of this country to express themselves on such a vital question.

This government of ours is accurately defined as a democracy in which the will of the people is supposed to prevail, and there is no other conceivable question which could arise in which the judgment of the people and the expressed will of the people would be more important to their own welfare and to the welfare of the nation.

THERE IS NO OTHER QUESTION or consideration which could involve such enormous loss of American lives, such immense destruction of American property, with the possible contingency even of the dissolution of the Union and the dismemberment of the country in case of disaster.

Obviously, there are occasions when there is no time or opportunity for a popular referendum on this most important of all questions affecting the welfare and the life of a nation—the question of putting the nation into a conflict involving its very existence.

But, obviously too, there ARE occasions when there is time and opportunity and ample reason for giving the people of this country the right to pass upon this crucial question of war, most vital to the life and liberty and independence of the country.

And when there IS time, and when there IS opportunity, and when there IS ample reason for such a referendum—as there was in the instance of the Great War, where the people were called upon to register their opinion and did practically register their opinion in a referendum—SURELY THAT REFERENDUM SHOULD BE MADE BINDING UPON THE SERVANTS OF THE PEOPLE IN OFFICE.

Surely those servants should not be allowed to defy the will of the people, and risk the lives and the property of the people, and the very existence of the nation, without consulting and without obeying the wish of the people—their supposed masters.

CONGRESS SHOULD STOP arguing about extreme cases and imaginary cases and bring itself to the consideration of concrete facts and actual instances as recorded by history.

And Congress should modify the Ludlow measure to meet conditions and cover situations which history and our own national experience have demonstrated to be factual.

There is a rightful and essential democratic principle in the basis of the Ludlow Amendment.

Let the Congress express that democratic principle in judicious phraseology which will define the principle and determine the occasion, but which will give the American people, on proper occasion, the right and opportunity to decide whether or not they desire to risk their lives and their property and their national security in AGGRESSIVE and UNNECESSARY warfare.

New York Day by Day

By
O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.

NEWSPAPER and magazine editors, movie talent scouts and especially newspaper syndicate chiefs are still toying with the forlorn hope of flushing another Will Rogers out of the corn rows. So far every effort has met the usual odious comparison.

Indeed, anyone with half of Rogers' tug in similar vein could, in the patois of the Rialto, "write his own ticket." His drawl, natural shyness and hesitancy in speech are often simulated. And there are a half dozen in Hollywood extra lists who look, laugh and walk like him.

Oddly, one of Rogers' sons and one who would shrink from trying to fill his father's shoes, is believed by many to come nearest to being the original package. He has many of his Dad's jerky mannerisms, speaking stumbles and a heavy fund of alfalfa aphorisms.

The best-mannered movie audiences in town are at the two Trans Lux theaters on the Gold Coast stretch of upper Madison avenue. Most of the clientele is composed of regulars, who include the President's mother, Frank Crowinshield, the Winthrop Aldriches, the Byron Foys, Mrs. Vincent Astor and such. Many customers use it as a drop-in between after-dinner and the night club buzz and are ermined and white tied—all very high tea and tra la la!

Buddy Baer, on the upswing in pugilism, shows none of the exhibitionist qualities that brought yawns for his brother, Max. Instead of indulging capers in the cafes, he goes to the movies or attends hockey and other sporting events. In his human contacts, he suggests an amiable grizzly—if there is such an animal. His only similarity to his brother is his exuberance.

A thin horse for a long race is strikingly emphasized by the Broadway columnist Louis Sobol. A fragile, bespectacled fellow who wouldn't weigh more than 125 pounds soaking wet with a flatiron in each hand, he seems to thrive on his nightly circle of the cafes. Wherever Broadway puts on a show or a dido, he is at the ringside jotting down the casualties and transmitting them into capable columns before he calls it a night.

The secret of such stamina is, of course, temperance in both food and drink. Sobol came out of New Haven via that journalistic penny-hybrid called The Graphic. He has a wife and daughter, has written a play, several novels and now and then makes personal appearances at the last of the vaudeville houses—Loew's State.

Crosby Gaige, the theatrical producer, is regarded by gourmets as one of the finest cooks this side of the Atlantic and a shrewd judge of wine. Too, he is the first person people think of in an effort to promote a benefit for some truly worthy person. Crosby lets others take the glory but he does the ground work. His latest benevolences were for the late Don Marquis—pronounced Mar-kwiss—who had been out of the running for six years and whose work made life brighter for millions in his time.

The Political Parade

By
George Rothwell Brown

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.

WITH dreams of inflation, as a depression cure-all, once more haunting the troubled sleep of some of our leading Congressional blocs, the situation at the Capitol today is ripe for another apostle of the stamp of William J. Bryan.

But there is no Bryan in sight, not even a "Silver Dick" Bland, and so the drive for the white metal gets under way slowly, with a bill for the remonetization of silver at $1.29 an ounce being whipped into shape by a House group, and a somewhat similar measure being carried around in a Senator's pocket.

One wonders what Bryan might do, with this situation, were he alive today. It is a safe guess that the silver question once more would become a burning political issue. There'd be plenty said about the crime of '73, when in the codification of the mint laws, in John Sherman's bill, the trade dollar of 120 grains took the place of the silver dollar.

Senator Stewart, of Nevada, sought to remonetize silver, in 1887. The "crime of '73" probably cost Sherman the Republican nomination in 1888. Harrison was named, and elected and the Sherman Act was then passed, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase silver bullion up to 4,500,000 ounces monthly at the "market price."

Cleveland in 1893 forced a reluctant Congress to repeal the silver purchase clause, and put the country firmly on the gold standard. Bryan went down to defeat on the silver issue in 1896.

Now once again silver becomes acute. Under the new silver purchase law, which grew out of the depression, about $900,000,000 of silver certificates has been issued, a considerable degree of inflation, but not enough for the new silver blocs in Congress, which have concluded that since inflation is inevitable, better money backed by this silver hoard that has been piled up than mere printing press money.

The silver bloc in Congress reached the height of its power and strength in the nineties. The controversy split parties, made Republicans out of Democrats, and vice versa.

Today it is claimed that silver has a majority in the House. It most certainly hasn't. The group in the Senate is small. Mr. Roosevelt will continue to lay down the monetary policy of the government.

The Editor Says:

SENATOR VANDENBURG has introduced a resolution for an inquiry by the Senate Finance Committee into the system of profit-sharing with a view towards its extension through American industry.

The Senator from Michigan justly describes the proposed action as a step to "spread prosperity without placing business in a straitjacket."

It is not too much to say that this step is one of the most salutary, progressive and constructive measures to come out of Washington in many a moon.

It may mark a turn towards genuine liberalism in the nation's policy towards labor and industry.

PROFIT-SHARING is the American answer to the European theory of the class struggle. It makes owners out of proletarians. It is in keeping with American ideals, traditions and experience.

One of the American industrialists who has had a profit-sharing plan in operation in his plant for 19 years, Mr. Joslyn of Chicago, reports:

> "We have had no strikes, no labor disputes of any kind. It has broken the back of all class distinction or antagonism between capital and labor. It has give us men unafraid of dependency or old age, men with a steadily growing stake in the country and its institutions—defenders of capital because they have capital to defend."

More recently, an outstanding liberal and friend of labor, Amos Pinchot, came out in favor of Federal legislation which would foster profit-sharing in corporations engaged in interstate business.

THIS GENERAL AWAKENING of interest in a tried American way of solving the relations between capital and labor and of increasing the purchasing power of the masses is a sign that the road of healthy progress is wide open to the people of this country.

It gives labor an increased share in the wealth of the nation and an increased responsibility in the management of industry.

It does so through the direct medium of diffused ownership, instead of through political proxies held by demagogues seeking to exploit labor.

Only those who would use labor as a stepping stone to power, only the Marxian advocates of the class struggle, will not like profit-sharing. It destroys their racket.

AMERICA WAS BUILT on the principle of the widest diffusion of ownership. Profit-sharing promotes that principle under modern conditions.

Human Side of the News

THE AWARD to "The Life of Emile Zola" as the best film of 1937, and to its star, Paul Muni, for the best screen portrayal, opens the question of historical truth in the theater.

The essentials of the life drama of Zola, particularly as it had to do with the Dreyfus case, are authentic, and in incident and characterization there is a magnificent dramatic antithesis which makes it a great film. But there is a disregard and distortion of literal, historic fact, for the obvious end of good theater, which makes pertinent the above question.

It may not be important. "Character is destiny," as Napoleon said, and perhaps only quibblers and pipsqueaks will fuss about actual historic detail in this splendid portrayal of character and courage triumphant over all obstacles.

Certainly there is a more important revelation of truth in the accurately stated moral issue of the film than there could possibly be in any consideration of dates and minor events.

It is true that dates and minor events are handled rather cavalierly in the Muni film, and it would seem that in one or two instances this treatment has thrown the film out of focus. Certainly any filmed life story should be a sharply outlined and accurate portrait.

For instance, there is that episode of the fiery young iconoclast, hearing sympathetically the story of the forlorn little drab in the words nursing cafe—himself a starveling—and tearing from his vitals the story of "Nana" which made his name and fame overnight.

That was one of the best bits of the play, but it is so far in variance from the actual happening that it throws the whole Zola story out of plumb.

Nana was written in 1880. It was in 1864 that Zola had written his first novel, Contes a Ninon. In between had come Therese Raquin, the Chronicles of the Rougan-Macquart Family, Le Ventre de Paris, La Faute de l'Abbe Mouret, L'Assommoir and several others. He was a successful and assured novelist when he wrote Nana. The point is that his success did not spring miraculously from near-vagabondia, as the film would have it.

The question frequently has been raised in its bearing on historical novels, as now in the theater. I remember some modern critic vehemently denouncing James Fenimore Cooper for his sentimental and romantic portrayal of the Indians, fixing in the American mind a picture of the Red Man which has nothing to do with reality.

Richard Carvel has been taken to task for slicking up Colonial days and twisting history. "Gone with the Wind" has been under fire by historical precisionists.

It is maintained by some of these critics—pedants, if you like—that in the theater and in fiction writing there is a special obligation to adhere closely to historic fact, as the challenging judicial temperament is not in play in such audiences and serious distortions may pass unassailed.

Certainly the talking films, with the intelligence and artistry revealed in the Zola picture, are taking their place as an educational force of undreamed-of potentialities. Is there or is there not an obligation for the most meticulous historic accuracy in films of this kind?

The answer is made difficult by the fact that this film so magnificently revealed the spirit, if not the exact letter of its theme; and it is true that the most faithful and exact historian in the world could not bring Zola and Dreyfus to life as did Paul Muni.

March of Events

THERE is only one form of Socialism, Communism and the "Brotherhood of Man" worth while. It is MUSIC.

The other evening while listening to a country-wide hook-up of a great symphony orchestra, which played Beethoven, Johann Strauss and Wagner, there suddenly descended on me like a revelation the miracle of UNITY in all great music, its power to obliterate all our differences, to dissolve all our egos in our common sorrows, our common joys, our common aspirations.

I thought: "Millions of persons are listening, with me, to this music. They are one with me. We have no political, racial, social or any kind of differences during this hour. I unite with them, and they with me, emotionally, intellectually and spiritually. As far as we are concerned, there is peace on earth, good will to all men, and the swords of the world may rot forever in their scabbards!"

Utopia! It is five million persons living as one person in the celestial country of Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony" or whirling on seas of mutual joy in Strauss' "The Beautiful Blue Danube."

And, peoples of the earth, that is the ONLY class-leveller you will ever know—MUSIC. It is the Garden of Eden—the only one that ever existed—made for you to walk in—MUSIC!

Dr. John Haynes Holmes, of the Community Church of New York, does not like "The Star-Spangled Banner" which, by the way, only became our official national anthem in 1931.

He says "our national anthem is full of boasting and pride. It celebrates war and its horrors. It breathes hatred and vengeance upon our foes."

Aside from the fact that Dr. Holmes is mistaken when he says that the anthem "celebrates war and its horrors," it would be hard to find in all history—and probably always will be—a national anthem that is not warlike.

"Boasting and pride" are healthy ingredients of normal nationalism, and this boasting and pride of peoples will continue so long as the world is made up of different kinds of organized nations and races.

The Royal Bank of Canada in a bulletin gives some interesting facts about the hold that newspapers have on the public.

The statistics of the royal bank point to this one inspiring fact—the real democracies of the world, where the press is free, are the greatest readers of newspapers. And therefore the most intelligent and independent of peoples.
